D. C. Shivers In First Taste Of Fall; 35 In Suburbs

'Some Warming' Forecast Tuesday; Cold Snap Catches City by Surprise

A cold air mass from Canada gave Washington its first chill of fall yesterday and may drop early morning temperatures today to 42 degrees in the District and 35 in the suburbs.

More than 15 fires were reported in the District and nearby as many householders turned on their furnaces for the first time since spring.

The Weather Bureau predicted fair and warmer for Tuesday.

For today, however, it forecast a high in the middle sixties accompanied by some cloudiness. The temperature early Tuesday should be 54.

The "front" of the cold air mass hit the District Saturday, the first day of fall.

It kept yesterday afternoon's temperature down to 57 degrees. The low was 45 degrees.

Normal temperature—the average of the high and low—should be 66 for September 24. Yesterday's average was 51 degrees.

The drop caught Washington somewhat by surprise.

Fuel oil dealers reported a sudden increase in "emergency" calls from chilled Washingtonians.

Heat was turned on in most hotels and in some apartment houses. In other apartment houses, the heating systems were not connected for winter service—and won't be until today.

Attendance at the Zoo was down to 25,000. Usual Sunday attendance this time of year, a bemoaning Zoo official said, is at least 50,000.

Moon in Total Eclipse Here at 10:54 Tonight

The first total eclipse of the moon visible here since October, 1949, will take place from 10:54 to 11:40 tonight.

That will be the "total" period of the phenomenon. Actually, the moon will start moving into the earth's shadow at 9:32 p. m. and will have moved out again by 1:02 a. m.

Under ordinary conditions, the moon, during the eclipse, will be seen as a "red ball."

Canadian Smog Blankets Wide Area South to D. C.

Washington was beclouded yesterday by an overcast of smoke that started from smouldering forest fires in far northern Canada and covered the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and Middle Atlantic regions.

The Weather Bureau here said such phenomena are rare. The smoke blanket's height was estimated at 14,000 feet and higher.

The sun was dimmed in the middle of the day over thousands of square miles of the United States and Canada.

Post Ad Succeeds Where Other Paper Failed

Mrs. Charles H. Bradley's classified ad to sell an oil burner failed to bring results when she ran it in another Washington newspaper.

Then Mrs. Bradley tried running the ad in The Washington Post. After three insertions, she had to cancel her Post ad, because it had brought such good response that the oil burner was sold.

Many Post classified advertisers cancel their ads after a day or two, because they get such rapid results. Whether an ad offers one item or many—it sells quickly and easily through The Post.

Mamma squirrel collars her wayward youngster

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

No doubt you recall Mrs. Knowlton's pet baby squirrel—the one that got lost in a radiator last Labor Day?

Well, it became quite apparent yesterday that it is nothing but a brat among squirrels, a regular juvenile delinquent.

Mrs. Knowlton, who lives at 1829 Phelps pl. nw., was eating Sunday breakfast in the sun parlor of her home about 10:30 a. m. when zoological turmoil broke loose

"All the birds in the neighborhood," she said, "started making an awful noise."

Being on familiar terms with the fauna around Phelps pl., Mrs. Knowlton investigated. She hadn't got very far when this juvenile delinquent squirrel's mother rushed frantically up to Mrs. Knowlton, and then rushed out obviously in trouble.

(It was this selfsame mother squirrel that rescued the kid squirrel from behind the radiator.)

By process of elimination, Mrs. Knowlton determined that a cat had chased the baby squirrel into a bush in the yard of the Potomac School, which is adjacent to the Knowlton home.

22 Horses Dead in Fire At Marlboro

2 Barns, Equipment Destroyed; Damage Put at $160,000

Twenty-two horses are dead as a result of Saturday night's $160,000 fire which destroyed two barns and equipment at Marlboro Race Track. Still another horse may have to be destroyed, track officials said.

Estimates of the value of the horses that perished were placed at from $75,000 to $100,000. The barns and equipment, destroyed by the flames, were valued at approximately another $60,000, track officials said.

The fire was discovered about 10:10 p. m. in an unoccupied tack room in Barn B. Fanned by a strong wind, blowing west to northwest, it swept rapidly through the barn and then through nearby Barn A.

As track attendants, trainers, police and firemen tried to lead the panicky horses to safety, other firemen played hoses on two other nearby barns and quickly extinguished flying embers. Both of the other barns were saved.

The two barns that were destroyed contained about 70 horses, approximately 50 of which were led to safety.

Several crews of men, working with bulldozers, cleared the debris yesterday, but found no traces of any human perishing in the blaze, officials said.

The two destroyed barns were about a quarter-mile distance from the grandstand and track. Six other barns, at two different locations and some distance from the fire, were undamaged.

Track officials said about 200 horses were stabled in the barns untouched by the fire. Another 200 horses, which have been running at the track, were stabled at

Sawyer Sees More Controls On Business

New Inventory Curbs Are Expected in Order To Meet Military Needs

Business almost certainly faces further controls, Commerce Secretary Sawyer warned last night, even though news from the Korean battlefront continues good.

This need not mean, he added on the CBS program "One Nation Indivisible," that the ultimate consumer need feel oppressive restrictions on his own buying. There should be no reason, he said, why American industry cannot produce all the military equipment needed to build up the Nation's strength and still provide "the highest living standard in the world."

Sawyer declared he had no doubt that controls in addition to those announced last week by the National Production Authority to limit inventories would be necessary. And he promised that if businessmen held onto or built up excessive inventories in disregard of the NPA order, "we will requisition what they have or we will requisition the excess without any hesitancy whatever."

"We will, perhaps," he added, "have so-called limitation orders by which we will forbid the manufacture of certain articles which are consuming materials needed in connection with military operations.

"There will probably be so-called priority orders or ratings under which a manufacturer is required to fill the orders of the military before he fills anything else."

On the vital question of steel, Sawyer said he believed there would be enough for defense and for civilian needs and that he was awaiting a report from the steel industry on its progress toward expansion. He said it was not necessary "at the moment" for the Government to build additional steel plants.

Redskins Upset, 35-21

Tigers Lose in 10th on 'Boner'; Yanks Win, Now Lead by 2½

A second straight victory over the Boston Red Sox and one of the great bonehead plays of all time combined to give the New York Yankees a 2½-game strangle hold on the American League lead yesterday.

The Yankees beat the Red Sox, 9 to 5, in New York, knocking them four full games off the pace, and in Cleveland, Catcher Aaron Robinson's "skull" of failing to tag a runner at home gave the Indians a 2 to 1 10-inning triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

The Nats came up with another Cuban pitcher yesterday, Carlos (Potato) Pascual, and he hurled a five-hitter in beating the Philadelphia Athletics, 3-1, at Griffith Stadium. In the National League the Philadelphia Phillies, trying to clinch their first pennant since 1917, were stymied for the moment by the Brooklyn Dodgers, who beat them, 11-0. The loss cut the Phils' lead over the Dodgers to five games.

In professional football yesterday the Redskins absorbed their first defeat in their second start of the year, losing to the Green Bay Packers at Milwaukee, 35-21.

In other pro football games Cleveland defeated Baltimore, 31-0; Philadelphia trounced the Chicago Cardinals, 45-7; Detroit topped Pittsburgh, 10-7, and the Chicago Bears staged a late rally to overcome San Francisco, 35-20.

Taft Decision On '52 Shifts GOP Line-Up

Casual Statement Disavowing Intention To Seek Presidency Believed Sincere

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A recent casual statement by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) that he won't again seek the Presidency has altered the whole 1952 GOP lineup.

The statement was generally received by Republicans in the same casual way it was made. Most of them dismissed it as a familiar political "come-on" device.

But a few of Taft's intimate friends say now he meant every word of it and more, though he left himself the usual "out."

The full import of his decision hasn't yet become clear to his almost leaderless party

Regardless of what happens to Taft in his November Senate race, Republicans seem likely to enter their nomination convention two years hence without an important new face and with a drastically contracted list of old ones.

"Ike" Ready to Return to Army

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Taft, the two leading champions of opposite wings of the party, will be present only as "Warwicks" and not as actual contenders.

Still a third impressive name, that of Dwight D. Eisenhower, may be stricken from the 1952 GOP picture before many weeks pass. For Eisenhower, who never conceded his political availability, has announced he is ready to return to the military whenever the Army needs him.

That would leave the predominantly liberal East and West Coasts represented in the Presidential sweepstakes by Gov. Earl Warren of California, Dewey's running mate in 1948; Gov. James H. Duff of Pennsylvania, and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts.

Taft's own once staunchly conservative Midwest, backbone of the Republican old guard, would be represented only by such right-wing stalwarts as John W. Bricker of Ohio and Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska unless there is a still-talked-of Taft alliance with Harold E. Stassen.

The GOP drought of Midwest conservative talent, magnified by Taft's quiet withdrawal from the 1952 running, explains to some Stassen's sudden re-entry into the political and international picture.

Stassen Promises Announcement

Now president of the University of Pennsylvania, Stassen last week said he will have an announcement "within 10 days" on his appointment to a post having both

West Berlin Economy Near Collapse

Idle Total Climbs Closer to 30 Pct.; No Recovery Hope Held Out for City

By Stephen White
NYHT News Service

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—The August figures for unemployment in the western sectors of Berlin, newly released, bear witness to the fact this city is drawing week by week closer to utter economic collapse.

The unemployment rate is creeping irresistibly toward 30 percent, and in the winter the index of employment inevitably drops.

Of the West Berlin labor force of approximately 1,168,000 men and women, during August, 294,398 were jobless. Another 31,104 were engaged in make-work projects.

Nor was the remainder of the population by any means well off. The 142,000 men and women engaged in small business or professional occupations reflect directly the ill-being of the general population.

It is a grim situation, and a hopeless one. There are no steps within the power of the West Berlin administration, or the three powers represented in West Berlin, that would stand any chance of altering things for the better.

The city is dying, and as it nears its end, it can be expected only to die so much the quicker.

No evil spirit, either Allied or Russian, is playing the major role in this slow decay.

This city was once the third largest in the world, and it rose to that eminence because it was the capital of a thriving Germany. It combined, in those days, the functions of Washington and New York. It was the administrative center of the country, the financial center, and the insurance center.

Anyone who cares to walk down Pennsylvania Avenue or a few hundred yards north from the Battery can recognize immediately what all that means. To Berlin came the hordes of civil servants that make a country go, and all the white-collar workers that operate the intricacies of finance, credit, and insurance. They are still in West Berlin, but their jobs are long since gone.

It makes no sense to govern West Germany from an enclave

Vigorous Enforcement Promised

Justice Forming Special Unit To Implement Anti-Red Law

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Justice Department already has begun organizing a special unit to handle problems posed by the Communist control law passed last weekend over President Truman's veto.

Attorney General Harold McGrath said yesterday the new law, which Mr. Truman branded unworkable, would be "vigorously" enforced. The new unit, he explained, would be part of the Justice Department's criminal division. The Budget Bureau, he added, would be asked for funds to hire an adequate staff.

Despite their alacrity in setting up machinery to enforce the complicated and far-reaching law, Justice officials saw a rocky road ahead and estimated the registration section alone would take two to four years to put across.

The Communist Party already has declared it and its members would refuse to register under the law, and Justice officials did not expect Communist "front" organizations would comply more readily. The law gives Communists and Communist front organizations—but not their members—30 days to register. Should they fail to do so, the Justice Department is directed to refer their cases to a subversive activities control board provided in the law, which will give them a hearing.

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), one of the law's authors, yesterday urged Mr. Truman to set up the five-man board promptly. He declared all Reds in the United States could be "brought to book" in two to four weeks if responsible agencies acted without delay.

With the ink hardly dry on the new law, which was whooped to passage over the President's veto by huge majorities in both houses, moves were already under way yesterday to soften its most drastic provisions. But McCarran, who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said his committee would "certainly not" consider proposals for a substitute when Congress returns November 27.

Nevertheless, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) 1 of 10 Democrats who voted in the Senate to sustain the President, said he would offer a substitute.

And Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, announced he would seek passage, when Congress returns, of a substitute he already has introduced.

"Communism is one of our greatest problems," he said, "but the bill we passed will do more harm than good."

In the President's veto message the legislation was denounced as imposing an impossible burden on the FBI, threatening military security, and aiding Communists more than it hurt them.

Marines Raise Flag in Seoul After Dramatic 2-Mile Drive

By Homer Bigart
NYHT News Service

SEOUL, Sept. 25 (Monday).—The United States Marines raised the Stars and Stripes over Seoul at 6:15 last night and then held Hill 79 against counter attacks launched by the Reds in a desperate nightlong effort to strike the flag from this vital position.

Cut off last night with Marines who took the hill, this correspondent came back with the first partol at daybreak and then caught a plane to southern Japan to file this dispatch.

Three large fires were raging out of control in the southern district of Seoul when I left the scene at 7 a. m. Warehouses in the Yongsun Yards had burned throughout the night and at dawn the whole city was covered with a smoky pall. The Marines' flag still floated from a bamboo pole on the roof of a clay hut perched on the summit of Hill 79.

The flag was raised by Marines of Able-A Company, First Battalion, First Regiment of the First Marine Division after a spectacular 2-mile thrust through the western suburbs. Col. Lewis B. (Chesty) Puller had entrusted the flag to Capt. Robert Barrow with instructions "to hoist a good place and let 'em know the Marines are here."

Searching a squalid clutter of huts on the summit, Corpl. Richard A. de Carlo of Woodside, Long Island found a 3-foot length of bamboo. On the roof of the topmost hut went De Carlo, Pfc. Law-

In Mass Flights

U. S. Seen Able to Rush Jets Overseas

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Two Air Force aces who crossed the Atlantic last week in jet fighters agreed last night that their pioneering proved trans-oceanic mass flights of jet fighter planes are feasible.

One of the pair, Lieut. Col. William D. Ritchie, 31, of 729 Monticello dr., Falls Church, might well have been pessimistic.

In a flight with Col. David C. Schilling, 31, of 3527 Edison st., Arlington, Ritchie was forced to bail out over Labrador. His plane ran out of fuel 100 miles from Goose Bay and the craft could not glide in from that distance.

"This was just a kink. It will be ironed out," Ritchie declared.

Schilling, one of the country's aces in World War II in Europe, completed the first nonstop trans-Atlantic flight in a jet ship in 10 hours, 1 minute.

Both men appeared yesterday with their bosses—Secretary of Air Thomas K. Finletter and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff—on an NBC television program, "Battle Report, Washington."

After the program, Schilling told a reporter the time could be trimmed to about eight hours if a speed record was sought.

"But we were out only to prove the principle. And it is sound—very sound. It's been proven over 3300 miles," the tall, curly-haired pilot declared.

The flight enabled Air Force planners to test communications, rescue facilities and rendezvous equipment (to get the planes together and in touch with their refueling ships).

The test really came on Ritchie's rescue. For some reason—yet uncovered—his Thunderjet would not take fuel from the B-29 flying gasoline station and he had run his plane "on fumes for a few minutes," he said, grinning.

But finally, when he had the plane down to 150 miles an hour—usual cruising speed is 460 or 470—at 3000 feet, he knew the moment had come for his first parachute jump.

He was over a narrow finger of land reaching out into Goose Bay, Labrador, when he bailed out with the ejection seat.

"I landed in a tree—a fir like a Christmas tree—and skimmed off the branches as I slid down.

"The chute was draped around

'Reformation' Of Christianity In China Begun

Reds Unify Sects, Demand End of 'Imperialists' Aid

HONGKONG, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Peiping radio in the Communist capital of China announced today that the reformation of Christianity in China is under way, including unification of various religious sects and the end of financial support from abroad.

The Communist station broadcast the text of a state-church declaration, outlining the future course of the Christian religion in China, which, it said, was composed last July. It said 1527 pastors, students, theologians and leaders already have signed it, including representatives of the YMCA, the YWCA and Chao Chichen, dean of theology at Yenching University.

Conditions under which churches and missionaries will be permitted to carry on their work in China include:

1. Purge of imperialist influence. 2. A halt to accepting support from abroad. 3. Education of followers against the evils of "imperialism, feudalism, bureaucratic capitalism". 4. The recommendation that the churches should "unify various sects."

The statement, said to be the work of 40 representatives of "various Christian churches in China," issued with Government approval, declared that during the past 140 years there had been a close relation between Christianity and imperialism in China, largely because missionaries came from imperialist countries.

Churches must instruct the masses of Christians to "recognize clearly the crimes committed by the imperialists in China" and "encourage Christians to take part in the movement for peace and educate them to support the Government's land reform policy," the statement said.

20 GIs Found Shot In Head, Hands Tied

WITH TWENTY-FIFTH DIVISION, Korea, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—(Delayed)—An advance element of the United States Twenty-fifth Division said today it had found the remains of 20 artillerymen who apparently had been shot in the back of the head after their hands were tied behind them.

The discovery was reported by radio shortly before noon. Members of the advance group said the bodies were those of men who were cut off from the main Twenty-fifth Division force near Wonson a month ago.

Russian Is Reported Killed, One Captured in Seoul Area

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (AP).—The New York Times says in a dispatch filed from "near Inchon, Korea" that a Russian major reportedly was killed and another Soviet officer taken prisoner by an American reconnaissance company in the Seoul-Suwon area.

The Times dispatch said the report came from a Seventh Division spokesman Sunday night (Korean time) but added that the information could not be confirmed immediately at Tenth Corps Headquarters.

The dispatch to the Times added:

"While there have been numerous reports of Russians advising the North Korean armies in the war against the United Nations forces, these have been consistently denied by Moscow. Up to now there have been no Russian bodies found on the battlefield or Russian prisoners taken.

"The Seventh Division spokesman also said a Soviet war correspondent had been taken prisoner. He did not have any names of the dead or captured Russians. He said he understood the two captives were confined to the Seventh Division prisoner war stockade.

"The Seventh Division spokesman had no details of the action in which a Soviet major had been killed and two Russians captured.

Planes Put 2400 Troops Into Kimpo For Drive

U. N. Forces Reach Kumchon, Yongdok; So. Korean Marines Land at Inchon

TOKYO (Monday) Sept. 25 (AP).—United States Marines and Army Infantry blasted through Seoul today toward the heart of the city. Combat commanders expressed the hope the old Korean capital might be taken quickly—possibly today.

The Leathernecks and doughboys were hitting North Korean defenders from four directions. A force of 7th Infantry Division soldiers crossed the Han River in swirling mists at dawn today. They sent a spearhead into the city already penetrated by three Marine prongs.

Red resistance in the ancient city crumbled at some points. At others it was holding firm despite crushing air and artillery bombardments followed by quick infantry assaults.

To the south and southeast on the Korean peninsula, doughboys opened the fourth month of the Korean war with a race to shut off retreat avenues for 130,000 Communists.

AP Correspondent Tom Lambert said the Doughboys landed in a dawn mist after a half-hour barrage

Marine First and Fifth Regiments joined in a fairly solid front all along the western side of Seoul. Another Marine force hit the city from the north.

Strong Army airborne infantry reinforcements poured into Kimpo Airfield, 15 miles to the northwest. They arrived in 150 transport planes after ships had sped the more than 2400 infantrymen from the United States.

South Korean Marines landed in force at Inchon port, 22 miles west of Seoul, to add their hitting power to the United Nations western force.

The Seventh Infantry landing aimed another spearhead at the heart of the capital. Dug-in Reds offered some opposition.

Hard-driving Americans had a gap of only 60 air miles to close—and Communist resistance bristled only in isolated spots.

The 60 miles lay between Osan and Poun, south and east of Seoul. Elements of the Seventh Division punched 10 miles south from captured Suwon into Osan Sunday. Troopers of the United States First Cavalry Division surged up into Poun from Sangju—a 55-mile dash in three days.

But there were indications of trouble at the Suwon airfield. AP Correspondent O. H. P. King re-

Popcorn Machine Taken Apart to Free Boy's Hand

It may be a long time before 6-year-old Ronnie McCauley of 4583 Blue Plains dr. sw., has an appetite for popcorn again.

Yesterday morning he caught his left hand in the rotary mechanism of an electric popcorn machine in a drugstore at 201 Boyer rd. sw., police said.

As Ronnie screamed, proprietor Herbert Linkous pulled the plug, disconnecting the machine, and tried unsuccessfully to free the boy's hand.

Police were called and Pvts. Percy W. Legg and Robert Rahman, of the Eleventh Precinct, worked on the machine for 10 minutes before freeing Ronnie.

With the help of neighbors, who supplied wrenches, pliers and screw drivers, they removed the top of the machine, pulled off the sides and finally freed the boy, who had two mashed fingers. He was taken home to his mother, Mrs. Margaret McCauley, who said she would take him to a doctor.

In an effort to stop his crying the boy was given a large bag of popcorn before he left the store, police said.

Soviets Held Ready To Write Off Korea

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

Russia apparently is preparing to write off the crumbling Communist campaign in South Korea as an incident of no importance.

That is the view of the best-informed American officials. They say the Soviet position is not completely firm yet, but is clearly tipping toward acceptance of the Red setback.

But the Russian attitude toward Northern Korea may be different. There is strong belief the Soviet forces or possibly Chinese Communist troops may occupy the country north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel for the expressed purpose of keeping peace but actually to prevent United States forces from getting close to Russian security areas like Vladivostok and the Manchurian border.

Ever since the U. N. landings near Seoul there has been in the opinion of State Department experts, a gradual change in Russian propaganda on the Korean war. It gets less time on the Moscow radio. It is given more moderate handling.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky made a speech in the U. N. General Assembly last week which officials here regard as having been less viciously hostile toward the United States than other recent Russian speeches.

In addition, some diplomats abroad are understood to have reported that Russian diplomats now are saying the Korean affair is of no importance and should be settled soon in the interest of world peace.

Diplomacy and propaganda always can be used to cover up the nation's real intentions. Theoretically at least, the Soviets could send their own or perhaps Chinese Red armies pouring into South Korea. Neither military nor diplomatic authorities here believe that will happen.

On the contrary, Washington's impulse now, in view of the success of the American offensives in Korea, is to think of international political and even domestic problems in terms of an ending of the Korean crisis.

The over-all question this raises is whether the United States and Allied nations can maintain the momentum of defense preparations set in motion by the Communist aggression in Korea.

President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson as well as Defense Department officials are convinced the drive to produce more arms, to consolidate military forces of western Europe, and to strengthen other areas against communism must be carried forward at maximum speed.

Acheson, for example, tells associates the point of vital importance which has come out of the Korean episode is that the Russians once were willing to risk global war and we must always act on the assumption they would be willing to do so again.

Nevertheless, officials recognize there is a difference between the long-range planning they try to do and the kind of popular and political support which translates their plans into action. Enthusiasm both in this country and abroad for rearmament is regarded chiefly as a respone to the dangers the Communist attack in Korea dramatized.

If this crisis is ended soon—with the Russians squeezing every ounce of "peace propaganda" out of such a development—the sense of relief that will come may change the political atmosphere in this country and abroad to such an extent that Government officials may have difficulty continuing the campaign for full-speed defense preparations.

Yet they consider the danger to be no less great than it was in July and August when Russian-armed and trained North Korean forces were pushing America's outgunned and outnumbered battalions back toward the sea.

Wilson Sees A-Program Hampered

By the United Press

Former General Manager Carroll L. Wilson of the Atomic Energy Commission, said today efficient management of the United States A-bomb program may be seriously hampered by newly - passed legislation.

Wilson

He deplored a bill, indorsed by AEC Chairman Gordon Dean and signed into law by President Truman Saturday, under which the commission itself gets the power to hire and fire the atomic general manager and fix his salary.

Wilson said the obvious purpose and effect of the legislation is to "downgrade" the importance of the general manager, who formerly was a semi-independent official appointed by the President, like the commissioners themselves.

He predicted it will make it more difficult to recruit a top-caliber executive to take over the post, vacant since he resigned several weeks ago with a blast at Dean's policies.

Wilson said the new law confirms the fears which he expressed when he resigned that the commission is drifting toward a cumbersome form of "management by committee."

Dean has refused comment on Wilson's charges. But members of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee backed Dean and accused Wilson of trying to "run the whole show" during his three years as general manager.

They indicated the legislation was rushed through in the closing days of the session to make sure actual control of the atomic program is vested securely in the hands of the five-man civilian commission.

Wilson said the original Atomic Energy Act of 1946 set up a highly-effective system under which the five commissioners hammered out long-range policies and the general manager handled day-to-day management of operations.

Now, he said, the general manager will be reduced to "a sort of executive secretary to a management committee." He said that committees are notoriously inept at managing day-to-day operations of large enterprises.

Greeks to Get Children Back, Tito Promises

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said today that the return of Communist-abducted Greek children—the principal stumbling block to good Greco-Yugoslav relations—had been assured by Marshal Tito.

Stopping over here during a tour of Europe, the Middle East and India, the Florida Senator conferred with Premier Sophocles Venizelos and told him that he had gained Tito's promise in Belgrade that Yugoslavia would return all children requested by Greek parents and families.

Pepper said that Premier Venizelos said he would issue a proclamation calling once more on Greek parents to list children believed kidnaped.

The Senator said he recommended that the United States Embassies in Belgrade and Athens lend full support.

Tito Official Assails Austrian 'Persecution'

BELGRADE, Sept. 24 (NYHT).—In a violent attack, a high official of Premier Marshal Tito's Communist regime today charged that Austria is persecuting a Slovene minority in the Austrian province of Carinthia.

The attack came as a surprise here after five months in which the Tito Government used gentler language towards Vienna and was believed to be carrying out a policy of Austrian-Yugoslav rapprochement.

The charges were made by Marian Brechelj, Vice Premier of Slovenia, a Yugoslav republic bordering on Austria, at a mass meeting in the Slovenian town of Gustanj.

Il Duce's Boots Put Up for Sale

ROME, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Benito Mussolini's barber chair, ping pong rackets and waterproof boots are up for sale.

Along with other personal belongings of the dead dictator, they will be sold to the highest bidder at an auction held by the Italian government to convert Mussolini's confiscated property into cash.

A copy of "Mein Kampf," perhaps given Mussolini by Hitler himself, appears never to have been read.

But Mussolini apparently devoted considerable time to reading books on Caesar, Napoleon and Alexander the Great. They were well thumbed.

Chinese Reds May Get Foot in Door to U. N., With Formosa No. 1 on Council's Tuesday List

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 24 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communists may get their long-sought chance this week to send a delegation to the United Nations—but on a strictly temporary basis.

The Security Council has been summoned to a meeting Tuesday, and the first item on its docket is the Formosa problem.

The Russians have demanded that Mao Tse-tung's Communist regime be invited to send envoys to state its case at Lake Success. And it appeared that here was an issue that would manage to produce the needed seven votes in the Council to assure the Peiping Communists a hearing.

While technically they would only be welcome for the duration of the Formosa debate, the consensus here was that an appearance of Peiping envoys would prove the opening wedge in a process that would bring the Chinese Reds full U. N. membership in coming months.

Postponement Is Possible

However, it was possible that the Council would again postpone the opening of the inevitable Formosa debate, and move on instead to Arab complaints against Israel and the India-Pakistan dispute over Kashmir.

When it does get to Formosa, the Council must take up, on the one hand, Soviet charges that the United States is guilty of aggression by sending its Seventh Fleet to Formosa, and on the other, the American proposal for full investigation of the issue.

Both sides also have put the crucial issue before the current General Assembly.

Chinese Nationalist Delegate Tingfu F. Tsiang, whose government has been girded for a long-heralded Peiping assault on its island redoubt, will take the rostrum Monday for what many observers believe will be his government's last appearance in an Assembly general debate.

Britain and Yougoslavia are two other major speakers on Monday's list.

May Urge Halt at 38

Yugoslav Forgeign Minister Edvard Kardelj is expected to urge that U. N. Korean forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur halt when they have reached the thirty-eighth parallel in rolling back the Red invaders.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin is expected to give general support to Secretary of State Dean Acheson's new plan for designating U. N. units in national armies that could quickly be summoned to stop any future Communist aggression.

But Bevin was reported leery of going along with that part of the Acheson blueprint that would enable the Assembly to meet on 24 hours' notice in case a Soviet veto kept the Security Council from moving the U. N. units into action.

The British, like France, were believed fearful that such a course would give too much power—on crucial issues of war and peace—to the U. N.'s small powers.

Reds' Big Cha... Missed at Inc...

TOKYO, Sept. 24 (AP).—If Russia or the Chinese Communists ever intended to give important new help to the Korean Reds, they missed their biggest opportunity at the time of the Allied landings at Inchon September 15.

General MacArthur, the United Nations commander, took a formidable, but by no means invincible, force to Inchon for a shoestring landing that has changed the whole complexion of the Korean conflict.

Maj. Gen E. M. Almond, commanding the Tenth Corps and a veteran of the Italian campaign in World War II, calls it the toughest landing beach he ever has seen—but it was the only one available for the purpose.

Less than one division of troops plunged in on D-Day, while hordes of sweating men labored against time and 28-foot tides to unload equipment needed to make the landing stick.

The United States Seventh Infantry Division, scheduled to land on D-plus one, was delayed a full day.

Rumors Hinted of Invasion

MacArthur and his planners counted on surprise to get ashore. They won it, even though the Communist radio at Pyongyang had broadcast in advance the plans for the "invasion," and it had been freely rumored in Tokyo two weeks beforehand.

MacArthur expected the Reds to pull away from the southern perimeter, as they now are doing. They would have to meet the Inchon-Seoul challenge to their vital supply lines.

No one knew how quickly they could race back north.

In the landing area a circle of Pershing tanks faced south, to meet with the thin force available whatever the Reds might hurry up from the south.

Then on September 16 the Allies in the south launched a general offensive that kept the Reds there preoccupied.

Then Barrows' men dug in for an eventful night. His was the most exposed position of the First Battalion which itself was stuck out 3000 yards ahead of the rest of the regiment.

Through the narrow alleys of Chongmaksang, Lieut. Col. Jack Hawkins, of Fort Worth, Tex., brought the First Battalion late yesterday. There was no time to mop up snipers and secure the district. To avoid night fighting in the teeming slums Colonel Hawkins ordered all his men forward into positions on Hill 79. It was already dark by the time the battalion tucked in its tail.

Fortunately, Hawkins' daring penetration had caught the Reds so flat footed that they were unable to mount an attack until late at night. By that time Hawkins' men were so strongly entrenched it would have taken a full Red division to knock them off.

It was some time after 9 p. m. when two grenade explosions at the western base of the hill told us the initial attack had begun. It was driven off by machinegun fire before the enemy could reach the tail of the supply train that wound down the narrow road.

Then the enemy shifted his attack slightly northward and tried to storm Barrows' position. Barrows' men dog-tired but still elated over yesterday's stunning success—beat off enemy infantry in hard fighting. The company suffered about a dozen casualties and held its perimeter.

Nevertheless we were immensely relieved when dawn broke. I still have the nasty prospect of getting back to the main line of the regiment. Enemy patrols had crossed the route during the night. Probably they had laid new mines and left behind some snipers. But one always feels lucky at sunrise after a bad night so I rode the first jeep back with Lieut. John W. Hutchinson of Lexington, Ky., and two Marines, one of whom manned the machinegun, and the other a Browning automatic rifle.

Behind us came an ambulance jeep with the first of the night's casualties to be evacuated.

Further along we met "Chesty" Puller advancing with strong reinforcements. "We are going right through the city today," he called out.

From Hill 296 on the northwest edge of Seoul, Marines were

NAACP to Ask White House Quiz Of Court-Martial

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (AP).—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People tonight said it is going to ask the White House and the Department of Defense to "investigate the psychological factors" in the case of an American officer sentenced to death in Korea.

Walter White, executive secretary, said "There are in times of war orders that have to be carried out and we aren't going to ask for any special consideration" in the case of Lieut. Leon Gilbert.

Gilbert, 32, of York, Pa., was sentenced to death by a court-martial for refusing to carry out a Twenty-fifth Division order.

White said "I want to know what happened to Gilbert intellectually and spiritually before we decide to take any action."

Soviets Held Ready To Write Off Korea

By New Law

Wilson Sees A-Program Hampered

By the United Press

Former General Manager Carroll L. Wilson of the Atomic Energy Commission, said today efficient management of the United States A-bomb program may be seriously hampered by newly-passed legislation.

Wilson

He deplored a bill, indorsed by AEC Chairman Gordon Dean and signed into law by President Truman Saturday, under which the commission itself gets the power to hire and fire the atomic general manager and fix his salary.

Wilson said the obvious purpose and effect of the legislation is to "downgrade" the importance of the general manager, who formerly was a semi-independent official appointed by the President, like the commissioners themselves.

He predicted it will make it more difficult to recruit a top-caliber executive to take over the post, vacant since he resigned several weeks ago with a blast at Dean's policies.

Wilson said the new law confirms the fears which he expressed when he resigned that the commission is drifting toward a cumbersome form of "management by committee."

Dean has refused comment on Wilson's charges. But members of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee backed Dean and accused Wilson of trying to "run the whole show" during his three years as general manager.

They indicated the legislation was rushed through in the closing days of the session to make sure actual control of the atomic program is vested securely in the hands of the five-man civilian commission.

Wilson said the original Atomic Energy Act of 1946 set up a highly-effective system under which the five commissioners hammered out long-range policies and the general manager handled day-to-day management of operations.

Now, he said, the general manager will be reduced to "a sort of executive secretary to a management committee." He said that committees are notoriously inept at managing day-to-day operations of large enterprises.

Russia apparently is preparing to write off the crumbling Communist campaign in South Korea as an incident of no importance.

That is the view of the best-informed American officials. They say the Soviet position is not completely firm yet, but is clearly tipping toward acceptance of the Red setback.

But the Russian attitude toward Northern Korea may be different. There is strong belief the Soviet forces or possibly Chinese Communist troops may occupy the country north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel for the expressed purpose of keeping peace but actually to prevent United States forces from getting close to Russian security areas like Vladivostok and the Manchurian border.

Ever since the U. N. landings near Seoul there has been in the opinion of State Department experts, a gradual change in Russian propaganda on the Korean war. It gets less time on the Moscow radio. It is given more moderate handling.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky made a speech in the U. N. General Assembly last week which officials here regard as having been less viciously hostile toward the United States than other recent Russian speeches.

In addition, some diplomats abroad are understood to have reported that Russian diplomats now are saying the Korean affair is of no importance and should be settled soon in the interest of world peace.

Diplomacy and propaganda always can be used to cover up the nation's real intentions. Theoretically at least, the Soviets could send their own or perhaps Chinese Red armies pouring into South Korea. Neither military nor diplomatic authorities here believe that will happen.

On the contrary, Washington's impulse now, in view of the success of the American offensives in Korea, is to think of international political and even domestic problems in terms of an ending of the Korean crisis.

The over-all question this raises is whether the United States and Allied nations can maintain the momentum of defense preparations set in motion by the Communist aggression in Korea.

President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson as well as Defense Department officials are convinced the drive to produce more arms, to consolidate military forces of western Europe, and to strengthen other areas against communism must be carried forward at maximum speed.

Acheson, for example, tells associates the point of vital importance which has come out of the Korean episode is that the Russians once were willing to risk global war and we must always act on the assumption they would be willing to do so again.

Nevertheless, officials recognize there is a difference between the long-range planning they try to do and the kind of popular and political support which translates their plans into action. Enthusiasm both in this country and abroad for rearmament is regarded chiefly as a respone to the dangers the Communist attack in Korea dramatized.

If this crisis is ended soon—with the Russians squeezing every ounce of "peace propaganda" out of such a development—the sense of relief that will come may change the political atmosphere in this country and abroad to such an extent that Government officials may have difficulty continuing the campaign for full-speed defense preparations.

Yet they consider the danger to be no less great than it was in July and August when Russian-armed and trained North Korean forces were pushing America's outgunned and outnumbered battalions back toward the sea.

Greeks to Get Children Back, Tito Promises

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said today that the return of Communist-abducted Greek children—the principal stumbling block to good Greco-Yugoslav relations—had been assured by Marshal Tito.

Stopping over here during a tour of Europe, the Middle East and India, the Florida Senator conferred with Premier Sophocles Venizelos and told him that he had gained Tito's promise in Belgrade that Yugoslavia would return all children requested by Greek parents and families.

Pepper said that Premier Venizelos said he would issue a proclamation calling once more on Greek parents to list children believed kidnaped.

The Senator said he recommended that the United States Embassies in Belgrade and Athens lend full support.

Tito Official Assails Austrian 'Persecution'

BELGRADE, Sept. 24 (NYHT).—In a violent attack, a high official of Premier Marshal Tito's Communist regime today charged that Austria is persecuting a Slovene minority in the Austrian province of Carinthia.

The attack came as a surprise here after five months in which the Tito Government used gentler language towards Vienna and was believed to be carrying out a policy of Austrian-Yugoslav rapprochement.

The charges were made by Marian Brecheli, Vice Premier of Slovenia, a Yugoslav republic bordering on Austria, at a mass meeting in the Slovenian town of Gustanj.

Il Duce's Boots Put Up for Sale

ROME, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Benito Mussolini's barber chair, ping pong rackets and waterproof boots are up for sale.

Along with other personal belongings of the dead dictator, they will be sold to the highest bidder at an auction held by the Italian government to convert Mussolini's confiscated property into cash.

A copy of "Mein Kampf," perhaps given Mussolini by Hitler himself, appears never to have been read.

But Mussolini apparently devoted considerable time to reading books on Caesar, Napoleon and Alexander the Great. They were well thumbed.

Chinese Reds May Get Foot in Door to U. N., With Formosa No. 1 on Council's Tuesday List

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 24 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communists may get their long-sought chance this week to send a delegation to the United Nations—but on a strictly temporary basis.

The Security Council has been summoned to a meeting Tuesday, and the first item on its docket is the Formosa problem.

The Russians have demanded that Mao Tse-tung's Communist regime be invited to send envoys to state its case at Lake Success. And it appeared that here was an issue that would manage to produce the needed seven votes in the Council to assure the Peiping Communists a hearing.

Reds' Big Chance Missed at Inchon

TOKYO, Sept. 24 (AP).—If Russia or the Chinese Communists ever intended to give important new help to the Korean Reds, they missed their biggest opportunity at the time of the Allied landings at Inchon September 15.

General MacArthur, the United Nations commander, took a formidable, but by no means invincible, force to Inchon for a shoestring landing that has changed the whole complexion of the Korean conflict.

Maj. Gen E. M. Almond, commanding the Tenth Corps and a veteran of the Italian campaign in World War II, calls it the toughest landing beach he ever has seen—but it was the only one available for the purpose.

Less than one division of troops plunged in on D-Day, while hordes of sweating men labored against time and 28-foot tides to unload equipment needed to make the landing stick.

The United States Seventh Infantry Division, scheduled to land on D-plus one, was delayed a full day.

Rumors Hinted of Invasion

MacArthur and his planners counted on surprise to get ashore. They won it, even though the Communist radio at Pyongyang had broadcast in advance the plans for the "invasion," and it had been freely rumored in Tokyo two weeks beforehand.

MacArthur expected the Reds to pull away from the southern perimeter, as they now are doing. They would have to meet the Inchon-Seoul challenge to their vital supply lines.

No one knew how quickly they could race back north.

In the landing area a circle of Pershing tanks faced south, to meet with the thin force available whatever the Reds might hurry up from the south.

Then on September 16 the Allies in the south launched a general offensive that kept the Reds there preoccupied.

The amphibious landing, toughest military operation in the book, was followed September 20 by the second most difficult: A river crossing against stout opposition. Marines, trained for this type of warfare, again were the spearhead.

To do this, General Almond had to rush Seventh Division infantrymen into positions the Marines had held along the south fringe of the beach and pull the Leathernecks north along the Han River.

This was done in the midst of battle, while tons of heavy equipment rolled along narrow and limited roads.

The first objective after Inchon was the capture of Kimpo Airfield. The field was taken, a vicious counterattack beaten off, and transport planes immediately opened an airlift to augment the supply channel through Inchon.

Against this rapidly developing offensive the Communists fought both bitterly and poorly. Hundreds of prisoners were taken. Hundreds more were killed.

'Operation Chromite'

Red commanders hurled their forces piecemeal at the advancing Americans in the same kind of desperation that marked the first United States efforts to halt Communist columns three months ago.

This bold operation began taking shape on paper last July 12 when American and South Korean fortunes were at their lowest. Infantrymen then were fighting for the bloody Kum River line.

MacArthur asked his planners to determine whether a landing could be made far behind the Communist lines, preferably at Inchon.

In a quarter of the usual time, Army and Navy men produced a plan, but not without considerable skepticism. It became "Operation Chromite," the Inchon landing.

The Reds had made a possibly fatal error. Thirsting for Pusan and victory, they had concentrated 90 percent of their known strength around the southern perimeter, trying for the kill. As MacArthur said, the Allies then "walked in their back door."

Red China Demands That U. N. Act Upon 'Air Invasion' by U. S.

LONDON, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Communist China charged today that the United States is determined "to extend the aggressive war against Korea, to carry out armed aggression on Formosa and to extend further her aggression against China."

In a formal note to the United Nations, Foreign Minister Chou En-lai also declared that "the peace-loving peoples all over the world definitely will not stand in the face of this with folded arms."

He said that if a majority of U. N. members continue to support United States action in Korea and China "they shall not escape a share in the responsibility for lighting up war flames in the east."

Chou charged anew that American planes had violated Chinese territory on September 22 and demanded that American "invasion of Chinese territorial air by military airplanes" be placed immediately on the agenda of the United Nations General Assembly.

He demanded also that representatives of Commuist China be admitted to the U. N. to take part in discussions of the charges against the United States.

Chou's strongly-worded note was broadcast by the New China News Agency from Peiping and monitored in London.

The broadcast said a formal note of protest was sent by Chou to U.N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie, Nasrollah Entezam of Iran, president of the U.N. General Assembly, and Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain, president of the U.N. Security Council.

Chou's note apparently referred to a Chinese Communist charge broadcast by the news agency Saturday that "American planes again raided and bombed Chinese territory yesterday, wounding three Chinese people."

Communist China has charged previously that American planes have hit Chinese targets beyond the borders of Korea and has demanded indemnities and punishment of fliers responsible.

Later, the United States admitted an American fighter plane might have strayed beyond the border by accident.

Express Strike Stops Shipments Under a Carload

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Railway Express Agency, struck here and in Jersey City, N. J., put an embargo today on all shipments of less than a carload lot in, out of, or through New York City.

The National Mediation Board in Washington immediately scheduled meetings here Monday between union and management officials and asked the strikers to return to their jobs.

A union spokesman said the union would join in the mediation sessions but that picketing would continue.

The strike started last night when 2300 union truck drivers and helpers walked off their jobs over wage and security demands.

U. S. Ship Held Aiding Peiping to Be Seized

By the United Press

The United States Coast Guard will seize an American merchant ship accused of running the Chinese Nationalist blockade to deliver war materials to the Chinese Communists, it was disclosed yesterday.

The ship—not yet named officially but whose identity is known—is expected to dock at a West Coast port within the next week and will be seized then, according to Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.).

He said it will be taken over to "safeguard" its official records and papers.

O'Conor, who is directing an official Senate investigation into the charges, first made on the Senate floor by Senator Warren Magnuson (D., Wash.), said the Senate Commerce Committee wants to make sure the records are not altered or removed.

"We want to leave no possibility of the papers being dispersed," he said.

In making the charges Magnuson read a letter from a merchant seaman who said his ship was running the Chinese Nationalist blockade to deliver oil, gasoline and armor plate to the Communists. The sailor said he was "ashamed" to be helping the "damned Reds" and suggested the U. S. Navy blow the vessel "out of the water."

It was some time after 9 p. m. when two grenade explosions at the western base of the hill told us the initial attack had begun. It was driven off by machinegun fire before the enemy could reach the tail of the supply train that wound down the narrow road.

Then the enemy shifted his attack slightly northward and tried to storm Barrows' position. Barrows' men dog-tired but still elated over yesterday's stunning success—beat off enemy infantry in hard fighting. The company suffered about a dozen casualties and held its perimeter.

Nevertheless we were immensely relieved when dawn broke. I still have the nasty prospect of getting back to the main line of the regiment. Enemy patrols had crossed the route during the night. Probably they had laid new mines and left behind some snipers. But one always feels lucky at sunrise after a bad night so I rode the first jeep back with Lieut. John W. Hutchinson of Lexington, Ky., and two Marines, one of whom manned the machinegun, and the other a Browning automatic rifle.

Behind us came an ambulance jeep with the first of the night's casualties to be evacuated.

Further along we met "Chesty" Puller advancing with strong reinforcements. "We are going right through the city today," he called out.

From Hill 296 on the northwest edge of Seoul, Marines were to Government center.

pressing down a ridge line close

Hill 79 gave the Marines direct observation on the southern half of the capitol. Hawkins can lay direct fire on the extensive army barracks across the Yongson yards and on the old Japanese army headquarters building.

The first of the city's prisons was in our hands and we entered it in hopes of freeing some of the estimated three thousand American prisoners of war believed in the city. But the prison was empty. Members of the Korean Young Men's Association who had been conducting underground activities against the Communists told us American prisoners had been moved northward in groups of 50 during the past week. They guessed the Americans were now in Pyongyang.

German Wall Slogans Say: 'Tommy Go Home'

SENNELAGER, Germany, Sept. 24 (AP).—Communist wall slogans reading "Tommy Go Home" lent an air of realism to the British army autumn maneuvers, which began in Germany today.

Lessons of the Korean campaign are to be studied in the week-long exercises, including the handling of "infiltrators."

As units of the Second British Infantry Division moved from their Ruhr barracks, they saw scrawled on walls the signs of West Germany's fifth column.

Interfaith Day Marked

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (AP).—A message from President Truman urging racial and religious "tolerance and mutual respect" was read to 5000 persons today on Central Park Mall. The occasion was the fifth annual Interfaith Day, sponsored by the Interfaith Movement, Inc.

3d Grader Leads Army Tests; Grid Star Last

ATLANTA, Sept. 24 (AP).—A youth with a third-grade education made the highest score to date on the intelligence test at the Atlanta induction center, Army officials said today.

The lowest was made by a college junior with a three-year football record. The standard Army intelligence test is aimed for those with an eighth-grade education or less.

NAACP to Ask White House Quiz Of Court-Martial

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (AP).—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People tonight said it is going to ask the White House and the Department of Defense to "investigate the psychological factors" in the case of an American officer sentenced to death in Korea.

Walter White, executive secretary, said "There are in times of war orders that have to be carried out and we aren't going to ask for any special consideration" in the case of Lieut. Leon Gilbert.

Gilbert, 32, of York, Pa., was sentenced to death by a court-martial for refusing to carry out a Twenty-fifth Division order.

White said "I want to know what happened to Gilbert intellectually and spiritually before we decide to take any action."

Everything at Steak!

—By Albert Parchey Mesirow—

AN ANONYMOUS friend reports that on leaving a taxicab after a minimum trip the other day, he gave the cabbie a fifty-cent piece and told him "Keep the change!" The cabbie smiled brightly. "Thanks," he said. "You must read that fellow Par-chee's column in the Post!" That's encouraging, but no reason for me to drop my one-man crusade for more generous tips for Washington cabbies. At the risk of boring you, I'll repeat my premise: since our cabbies received their last official fare increase (1942) the price of cabs has doubled; gas costs half again as much; service has gone out of sight. By the time your driver has deducted from the fare you give him, carrying charges and amortization on his cab; gas, oil, tires, license, repairs and insurance, there's virtually nothing left for his rent, clothing, shelter and home necessities. That's the reason for my "crusade," the slogan for which is:

Twenty cents is no more than fair
To tip the fellow who gets you there!

I don't believe you can drop an extra dime in a more deserving place!

steaks! steaks! steaks!

The cabbie above mentioned notwithstanding, the correct pronunciation of the name of our establishment is "Par-shay's," and not Par-key or Par-chee. Thank you. The address is the southwest corner of 19th and K St. N.W. Come in soon steaks! steaks! steaks!

Every so often I try (as I did last week) to tell you in my fumbling way, about our Sir-loin steaks, but I'll confess that my heart isn't in it as perhaps it should be. For to me, the Filet Mignon is, always has been and always will be, the finest, most satisfying, most delicious food discovered by man! Were I a poet, instead of a restaurateur, I would grow lyrical about the Filet Mignon. Not being a poet, I try to convey to you the full possibilities of this superb beef in its preparation. As you may know, we cut our filets ourselves, choosing them from the hearts of the tenderest, most perfectly marbeled and delicately textured, naturally aged tenderloins that the great markets of Kansas City and Chicago can provide. We cook them only to order. Yours is first dipped in a savory searing sauce that effectively seals-in its rich natural juices. This searing sauce, an inspiration of our Chef Heller, has a base of flavorful soy oil and contains herbs and spices in a delicate balance that brings out (but imparts no flavor of its own) the luscious succulence of the beef. Dipped, your filet is whisked under the hot flame, turned and re-turned until it is exactly as you ordered it. Then it's rushed to your table, buried under a mouth-watering sauce of tender white mushrooms sauteed in creamery butter and doused with fine wine. As you plunge your eager fork into your filet, the imprisoned juices cascade out in ruby rivulets, flecked with golden fat. So tender is this culinary masterpiece that you scarcely need touch knife to it! We serve it with a heaping platter of dry, crispy, crackling-hot, golden French fried potatoes, an icy heart of lettuce salad drenched with Chef Wilbur Smith's inimitable Rocquefort cheese dressing (if you choose) and the famous Parchey roll basket with lots of butter! A more satisfying meal I cannot imagine . . . nor one more delicious. Come in and try it soon. Our address: 19th at K St. N.W.

Command Choice For Europe 'Touchy'

Heuss Interrupted

Police Fight 2000 Reds at Ruhr Session

BOCHUM, Germany, Sept. 24 (U.P.).— Fist-swinging Communist youths traded blows with police and young miners here today and disrupted a speech by West German President Theodor Heuss.

The Communist youths, some 2000 strong, tried to break up the meeting of Ruhr coal miners, but were routed by 500 police. Twenty-five Communists were arrested and later released.

Reinforcements of 275 Communists from Thuringia in the Soviet zone arrived at Bochum by bus, but police held them on the outskirts of the town until the meeting ended.

Heuss was speaking to 20,000 persons on the occasion of the first youth meeting of the miners' trade union, when the members of the Free German Youth (Communist), jumped up to distribute leaflets and shout.

Forcing their way to the speaker's platform, the Reds put up a banner and fist fights broke out.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (U.P.).— The 12 members of the North Atlantic Treaty Council, apparently agreed in principle on creation of a Western European army, today faced the touchy problem of how to organize its high command without clashing with national constitutions and principles of sovereignty.

It is expected that constitutional problems will be ironed out when the council reconvenes probably Tuesday after a week-long recess. Military and financial questions will be left over to a conference of pact defense ministers scheduled for October in Washington and to later talks on other levels within the Atlantic Pact organization.

The council called a recess last week to reach solution on two problems: The question of German participation in a projected European army and organization of the high command.

The German problem seemed to have been solved in top secret conferences of Big Three foreign and defense ministers here Friday and Saturday. No announcement of any decision was made at the end of Saturday's meeting, but informed sources believed that the consideration of the question of German integration was postponed until France and other Atlantic community nations were fully rearmed and more United States divisions were assigned to Europe.

It was understood that the United States is suggesting a command arrangement whereby a supreme commander responsible to the Atlantic Council but enjoying a large degree of independence would be appointed. He would be assisted by a joint international staff composed of chiefs of staffs or other representatives of all nations joining in the European army.

Such a commander would have blanket authority to send forces of any participating nation to any spot within the Atlantic area where their presence would be judged necessary.

East Germany Begins New Purge Campaign

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (A.P.).—Russian-occupied East Germany was welcomed into the family of Soviet satellite states today. Simultaneously, the East German republic embarked on a big new purge campaign against "saboteurs and western agents."

The official Soviet newspaper, Taegliche Rundschau, said the East German state had joined "the mighty peace front headed by the Soviet Union."

East Germany already had become a part of the Soviet orbit through a series of "friendship" and economic treaties with Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania.

Rundschau asserted the new purge must be intensified to "root out these (western) gangsters—these enemies of our democratic republic."

German Youth Transfer Seen Paying Off

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—More than 15 million dollars of the United States taxpayer's money has been spent since the war to turn German youth toward democracy. American officials said today that the investment is beginning to pay dividends.

"The kids are catching on fast, and they like it," a youth activities official told American and German correspondents on a four-day tour of United States zone youth centers. "It's the grown-ups we have trouble weaning from their old ways, not the youngsters themselves."

Lawrence E. Norrie, chief of the United States High Commission's community activities branch, said lack of trained leaders has been the chief problem in the five-year effort to help the Germans help their own youth.

Study trips to the United States and other countries, and leadership training schools, which have given short courses to nearly 20,000 youth leaders, have begun to fill the gap.

The first group of refugee teenagers to spend a year in the United States has returned to Germany with one idea in mind—to get back to America and stay there.

The 17-member group was sponsored by the Brethren Service Committee, whose member families in the United States "adopted" the youngsters for a year. Their transportation by air to and from America was paid for by the United States High Commission's program.

Typical of the group were Manfred Kaltschmidt and Ilse Schwochlow, both 17-year-old children of refugee East German families. Both spent their junior year in an American high school.

Manfred spent his year in Dayton, Va., with the family of Simon D. Gliok, a Brethren preacher.

Pays Own Way To Korean War

REENLISTS—Sergt. First Class Richard Petzer of South San Francisco, Calif., a seven-year Army veteran serving with the occupation forces in Germany, wanted to get into the fight in Korea. With his current enlistment up he reenlisted, and, taking a furlough, flew from Germany to California and then to Japan at his own expense. Making his way to the fighting front, he said he was a replacement. Officers were perplexed, but after a cablegram to Washington Pretzer was assigned to the Twenty-fifth Division within the Russian zone. Similarly, capital is not going to make its home within sight of an aggressive Communist state, a hundred miles away from the area in which its operations are planned to bear fruit.

West Berlin's Economy Nears Utter Collapse

War Seen Only Way

At best, the sources of employment will return to West Berlin only if the country is once more united. In short, it will take a war—civil war or world war—to recapture for Berlin its position. And a war is likely to leave Berlin ruined so physically that it would be futile to think of re-establishing it as a major city.

West Berlin's industry, if it is to do business at all, must do business with the Western zones. It must draw upon them for raw material and ship the finished product to them for sale. The east zone is next to useless, for many reasons: It is too poor to form an effective market, too much dominated by the Russians to form a market with which business can readily be done; too easily affected by arbitrary Russian decisions.

West Berlin's business, therefore, must compete with zonal business of the zones' own grounds. There is a growing tendency for major West Berlin companies to leave the area and move to western Germany.

So far there has been no major exodus, although a few large companies have made their way down the road to Helmstedt and the West. But that the trickle is to grow soon into a stream and then a torrent is a conclusin that it is difficult to resist.

Berlin Barrier Battle Enters Its Fifth Day

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (U.P.).— The Battle of the Barrier entered its fifth day today with armed Russian and British troops glaring at each other across a candy-striped pole near Gatow airfield.

The British Manchesters were on duty again, about 100 of them, supported by armored vehicles and machine guns.

Man Found Drowned With Life Preserver

Fishermen on the Patuxent River near St. Marys Beach, St. Marys County, Md., yesterday found the body of a man about 20 years old, Maryland State Police said.

The body, clothed in shirt and jacket, was supported by a life preserver from the Benedict Boat Rental Co. A certificate of accidental death by drowning has been issued.

GIs Join Marine Forces Inside Seoul

ported from an air base in southern Japan that American cargo plane flights to Suwon had been halted this morning.

Red Korean artillery positions were reported on hills overlooking the airfield. The field was used Sunday by the cargo planes.

The northern front of the old southeastern beachhead was lifted back to about where it was at the end of the first month of the war.

Hamchang was entered by other First Cavalrymen striking north from Sangju. Hamchang is 28 air miles northeast of Poun and 75 southwest of Osan.

To the east 30 air miles, South Korean Eighth Division forces were back in Andong on the Naktong River in the middle of the northern front, United States First Corps spokesman reported today.

The spokesman also told Associated Press Correspondent William Jorden that the Republican Third Division had shoved back into the outskirts of Yongdok, shell-shattered town that was long the east coast anchor of the U. N. beachhead.

A third prong of the fast-traveling First Cavalry Division speared south from Sangju yesterday to the northern outskirts of Kumchon, junction on the main Seoul-Pusan highway and railroad lines.

But first into the town, the First Corps spokesman reported, were men of the veteran United States Twenty-fourth Infantry Division. Patrols of their division, which was pushed down this very corridor in the early days of the war, came back today. They entered the town over the same route—from the southeast.

Inside Kumchon, they ran into tough Red resistance.

At Seoul, the United States Marines swarmed across the Han from the captured southwestern suburb of Yongdungpo under cover of an early morning mist.

North Koreans on the north bank dropped several mortar shells into Yongdungpo within 75 yards of the assembling Marines a few minutes before the crossing. But they did not fire a single shot as the Leathernecks wallowed through the water in their amphibious vehicles.

AP Correspondents Don Whitehead and Tom Lambert, who rode with different elements of the attack, reported the Reds in Seoul were caught completely off balance.

By midafternoon, the column of the First Marine Regiment had driven well into the thickly populated southern section of the capital, which has about one million residents.

Seizing a height, the Marines looked down on Seoul's big gas works, railroad yards and military barracks and the Seoul end of the broken steel railroad bridge blown up by the retreating South Korean Army as it fell back south of the Han when the Reds seized Seoul June 28.

Virginia Colonel Leads Column

Correspondent Lambert, entering Seoul with the First Marine Regiment, estimated the column had moved three miles inland by mid-afternoon Sunday. At that time, Lambert said the regiment, under command of Col. Lewis "Chesty" Puller, Saluda, Va., was 2½ to 3 miles from the South Korean Capitol building, which is in the north end of the city.

A few low ridges intervened between the First Regiment and such familiar landmarks as the Banto and Chosen Hotels, the Capitol and Duksoo Palace, Lambert said.

The route of Puller's Marines lay through a suburban area jammed with the mud-walled, thatch-roofed huts typical of southern Korea.

None of the houses had been damaged. The residents, silent and impassive, stood by the road as the Marines moved forward.

A few houses sported small paper South Korean flags.

There seemed a dearth of young men around the houses that bordered the single, narrow, twisting road.

There was no actual street fighting on the way in, but the Marines were running into something new to them—house-to-house fighting. Capt. Stone Quilaran, San Antonio, Texas, characterized the fighting so far as attacks on "small pockets of enemy."

Farther north, Marines of the Fifth Regiment, commanded by Col. Ray Murray, San Diego, Calif., met continued stiff resistance from Red fortifications in the park atop South Mountain around which much of Seoul is built.

Murray's regiment had crossed the Han northwest of Seoul September 20 and drove into the suburbs in hard fighting all the way.

An ominous quiet hung over a greater part of Seoul as the Marines effected their Sunday-morning entry and linkup.

The suburb of Yongdungpo was completely in Marine hands, but the adjacent Seoul military airstrip, also on the south side of the river, remained a no-man's land.

On the farthest southern front, a tank-led force of the United States Twenty-fifth Division made a breath-taking dash of 70 road miles in 48 hours to reach the southern edge of Chinju.

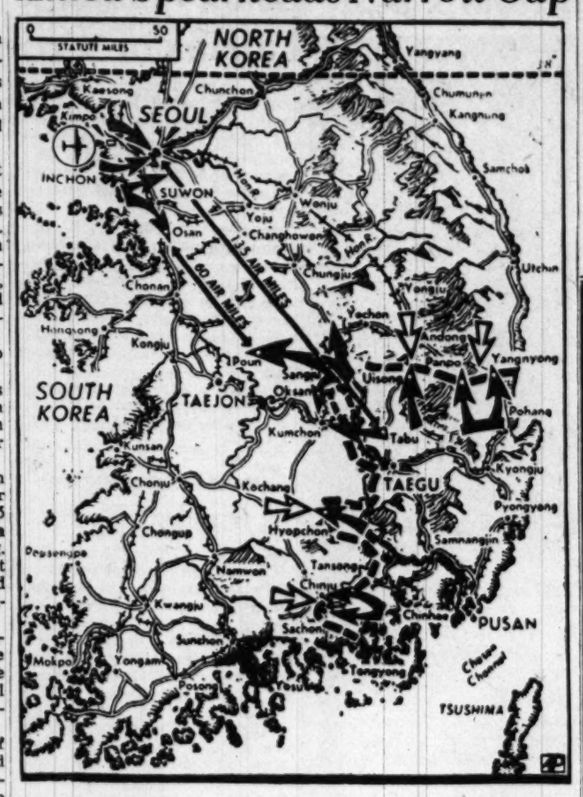
A few Communist troops were dug in on flatlands skirting the city, Associated Press correspondent Stan Swinton reported Sunday, but United States artillery and warplanes stabbed repeatedly at the burned-out town. Chinju once was the springboard for North Korean power drives aimed at Pusan, 55 miles to the east.

Swinton said that enemy opposition everywhere on the southern front was light. Hundreds of white-clad figures in groups of twos and threes—possibly refugees and Red soldiers intermixed—moved northwest along roads out of Chinju.

Complete occupation of Chinju, expected momentarily, would cut off the last escape route by road for Reds remaining within a 4000-square-mile sector of former Red-occupied territory, Swinton said.

On the southern front South Korean Marines moved up the Tongyong Peninsula into Kosong, the former Red headquarters that was seized Saturday by a Twenty-fifth Division task force.

Allied Spearheads Narrow Gap



Associated Press WIREPHOTO MAP

SIXTY MILES TO GO—Distance lines show how the Allies have sharply reduced the gap between their South Korean bridgeheads. U. S. First Division Cavalrymen have branched out in a three-pronged assault after moving 55 miles in three days from Tabu, north of Taegu. At Poun they are only 60 miles from Allied troops driving south at Osan. West of Seoul two Marine columns have linked up after a second Han River crossing. Paratroopers have been landed at Kimpo Airfield to support the Seoul drives. Black arrows locate main Allied drives

Hearing Today On Bolivian Pilot's Permit

The Civil Aeronautics Board will begin hearings today on whether to revoke the United States flying license of Capt. Erick Rios Bridoux on charges growing out of the air disaster at National Airport last November 1.

Bridoux was the pilot of the Bolivian fighter which crashed into an Eastern Airlines DC-4 in which 55 persons died.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration has charged Bridoux with failure to conform to the traffic pattern, failure to follow instructions from the tower, and "careless and reckless" flying.

Several tower controllers are scheduled to appear today in Conference Room B of the Departmental Auditorium. The open hearings begin at 10 a. m. before S. Thomas Simon, the CAB's assistant chief examiner in charge of safety investigation.

Cause May Be Revealed

The CAB's verdict may develop strong indications of what caused the tragedy, although the board conducted a separate investigation to determine the cause. The report of that investigation has not been made public.

Rios was alone in his former United States army plane when it collided with the transport. Rios rode his wrecked ship into the Potomac. He was the only survivor of the tragedy, although he suffered a broken back and multiple body injuries.

Rios has denied responsibility for the collision. He blamed it on "careless and negligent" operation of the airliner "and/or careless and negligent operation of the airport control tower . . . by employes of the administration of civil aeronautics."

Rios does not have to appear at the hearing. Bolivian Ambassador Ricardo Martinez Vargas said Rios is in LaPaz but a Bolivian army officer said he is in Washington.

Damage Suits Pending

Besides determinnig Rios' right to fly again in this country, the hearing may give a clue as to who is liable in $4,000,000 in damage suits which grew out of the collision. The suits are pending in Federal Court.

'Weegee' Stays Awake to Find 'Psychic Shots'

Weegee, the "psychic" news photographer from Manhattan, has been touring the sleeping city of Washington for the past few nights.

Weegee

No paper here has hired the 50-year-old character who makes a trademark of his beardy appearance, baggy eyes, inevitable cigar and hat (removed only for studio photographs such as the one alongside). He just had to stay in practice.

His mission here is to announce the opening of 'T'he Sleeping City" at RKO Keith's Wednesday —the second film which he has "experted." He claims to know every cobblestone of New York City and—more important—every cop.

Almost unknown as Arthur Fellig, his actual name, "Weegee" got the more familiar monicker, he says, from city editors who found his coverage "psychic"—like an ouija board. "City editors can't spell, you know," he commented.

One night, for instance, he was standing on a corner in Chinatown and, on the spur of the moment, made a shot of the intersection. Fifteen minutes later the corner blew up.

"The editors said it was very suspicious, but I didn't do it. Even though it had been a dull week—only three gangster shootings that week—and after all I have to live." That's Weegee's story.

Youth Arrested After 70-Mile-an-Hour Chase

HITS SHOW WINDOW—A 17-year-old youth, operating a stolen car, crashed into the show window of the Fannie May Candy Store, 1010 E st. nw., as the climax to a 70-mile-an-hour chase. He was unhurt but damage to the store was estimated at $1000

A 17-year-old youth was arrested early yesterday after a 70-mile-an-hour automobile chase which ended when the car crashed a show window at 1010 E st. nw.

The youth was charged with unauthorized use of an auto, speeding, no District permit, and passing two red lights and three stop signs. He was held at the Juvenile Home.

The chase ended when the car sideswiped a taxicab operated by Mel Gilkerson, 20, 5501 Temple Hill rd., Temple Heights, Md., and crashed into the show window at the Fannie May Candy Co., Inc., causing damage to the store estimated at $1000.

The chase began when police saw a speeding auto turn onto 9th st. ne. from H st. Pvts. Paul W. Knight and A. G. Fielder followed the auto past Union Station to 1010 E st. nw.

The car's owner is listed as Edward G. Ferrera, 2201 G st. nw., a student at George Washington University. He said he hadn't known his car had been stolen until police called to tell him it had been recovered.

County Manager Foes Warn Fairfax of 'Pressure' Menace

The county manager form of government would leave Fairfax County a prey to pressure groups and political machines, the Fairfax County League of Civic Organizations Favoring the County Executive Form declared yesterday.

Machine rule would result, the league contended, from the general slate or "at large" voting for the six county supervisors provided for in the manager form. The executive form would allow residents of each of the six magisterial districts to elect one supervisor.

Opponents of the executive form have previously argued that election by districts would give half the board of supervisors to a "tiny majority" of 17 percent of the population who live in the county's three sparsely settled districts.

The league also charged the manager form would result in "one man government," giving the manager power to make appointments and removals without the board having any legal say in the matter. Pro-manager groups have charged the executive form gives the board all the actual appointive power, allowing the executive to make only recommendations.

The league maintained the executive form was free of the above "disadvantages" while retaining everything in the way of "administrative efficiency" provided by the manager form.

The league was formed about a week ago around a nucleus of several members of the 21-member government study commission which advocated the executive form.

Fairfax voters will have their choice of the executive form, the manager form, or the present form of government in a November 7 referendum.

2 Events to Honor Dr. 'Curley' Byrd

BALTIMORE, Sept. 24 (AP).—Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, will be honored this fall in two big affairs.

He is to be given a mammoth testimonial dinner in Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory December 6 by Maryland alumni. About 5000 persons are expected at $10 a plate.

Before that, however, Byrd's home town of Crisfield will fete him on October 6, which has been set aside as "Curley Byrd Day."

Dr. Byrd is rounding out 15 years as president of the university.

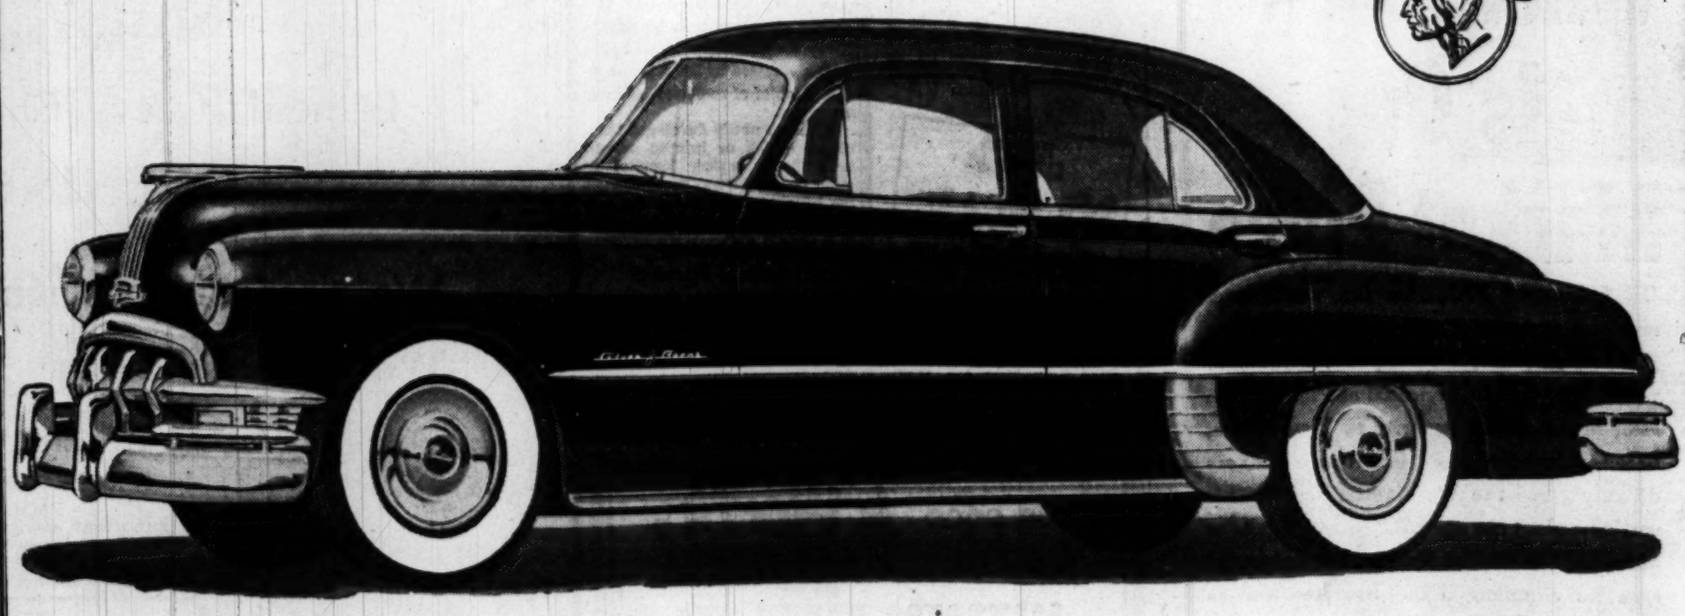
A Truly Wonderful Car!



If you were to sum up, in one word, the complete story of the new Pontiac, no word would fit so precisely as "wonderful."

It's the most natural thing in the world to describe Pontiac's rare beauty as "wonderful." No other word seems to quite do, either, for the luxurious comfort and appointments in Pontiac's big new Bodies by Fisher.

And on the road, Pontiac just naturally accepts superlatives—because it is such an eager car, such a relaxed, easy-striding performer—for such a long, long time.

Perhaps the most "wonderful" thing of all is Pontiac's price—so low that virtually nobody seriously challenges the idea that dollar for dollar you can't beat a Pontiac!

Democrats Back Citizens Advisory Plan

The District Democratic Club yesterday indorsed the proposed establishment of a Citizens' Advisory Council to assist the District Commissioners.

The club acted after a discussion of the proposal by Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, the group which initiated the move for the council.

Meeting at the Dupont Plaza Hotel, the club was told by Charles VanDevander, newly-appointed publicity director for the Democratic National Committee, that Democrats this fall would campaign on the record and would leave "smear tactics" to the opposition.

who came along, Mrs. Knowlton got the baby squirrel out of that mess.

Mrs. Knowlton called The Washington Post about this exploit, and Photographer Henry Rohland arrived.

The scene now is the sun parlor. Mrs. Knowlton is there, baby squirrel is there, and mamma squirrel is shown in.

What happens but that the baby squirrel wriggles out of protective custody and jumps into a fishpond.

Mrs. Knowlton fishes it out and dries it off.

What happens but that baby squirrel again jumps into the fishpond. And again it's Mrs. Knowlton to the rescue.

The squirrel, having had enough of water, dashes into a fireplace. Once more Mrs. Knowlton assists.

So the squirrel now gets itself stuck in a pump organ in the room. Mrs. Knowlton, having had that Labor Day assist from the mother squirrel, persuades the mother into the organ after the baby.

Doesn't work. Mamma squirrel goes psychotic. In and out of the organ she dashes; in and out.

So Rohland unscrews the front of the organ. After many difficulties, the baby squirrel extricates itself rom a mess of braces. (At one point, the pedal of the organ is pushed and the baby squirrel replies in soprano.)

Finally a picture is taken and Rohland leaves. As in Juvenile Court, Mrs. Knowlton releases the juvenile delinquent in custody of its parent.

It might seem by this time that the baby squirrel has had enough.

It hasn't, Clambering up some vines with mother squirrel, that baby squirrel drops off and nearly fractures itself.

Mrs. Knowlton dries it out and places it in front of an electric heater to recuperate. That was the last heard from the squirrel last night.

It is enough to last for weeks to come.

Auto Plunges 40 Feet From Viaduct; 4 Killed

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—An automobile loaded with guests returning from a wedding reception smashed through a guard railing and plunged 40 feet from a viaduct on Highland blvd. in Brooklyn early today, killing four persons, including a 7-year-old girl, and seriously injuring two others.

Police said the driver of the car, identified as Girolamo Iacono, 50, apparently lost control. The automobile ripped out 35 feet of the guard rail and dropped end over end onto the intersection of Vermont and Sunnyside aves.

Failure Of Leadership

If the spectacular events which preceded the final vote to override the President's veto of the Communist-control bill have no other effect, they ought to bring about a thoughtful review of the failure of leadership that made enactment of this measure possible. After both houses had passed the bill by overwhelming majorities, the President wrote a powerful veto message. A handful of Senators dramatically held the Senate in continuous session from noon on Friday until 5:23 p. m. on Saturday in order to pinpoint each objection the President had raised against the measure. But both of these heroic efforts came too late. A few legislators who had originally voted for the bill switched over to opposition. But there was no hope of any substantial number doing so. The cause had been hopelessly lost when the bill was permitted to slip through both Houses without the adoption of any policy concerning it on the part of the majority party.

When it became evident that Congress would enact some anti-Communist legislation, the Administration did send to Capitol Hill a number of proposals designed to take the place of the Wood bill passed by the House. But it is all too obvious that no understanding was reached between the President and congressional leaders. When the final showdown came, the House overrode the veto by 286 to 48, with 161 Democrats and 125 Republicans in the majority. In the Senate, Majority Leader Lucas was one of the 26 Democrats who flouted Mr. Truman's belated leadership. The final vote of 57 to 10 in the Senate is an appalling reflection upon the leadership of that body as well as upon the working relationship between the Senate and White House.

Sponsors of the bill took advantage of the fact that the country is aroused over Communist aggression in Korea in order to drive through a hodgepodge measure that would not likely have been enacted in any other circumstances. But it had been apparent since June 25 that this strategy would be followed. The ominous McCarran bill could have been beaten only by appointment of a commission to work out a comprehensive security program, as this newspaper urged, or by agreement between the President and congressional leaders upon a substitute on which they would stand together. In the absence of such an agreement there was never a real chance to defeat a measure carrying the anti-Communist label on the eve of the congressional elections.

We assume that the Administration will now try to repair the damage by seeking amendment of the act. That will be difficult in any circumstances. But it is likely to be impossible unless the President and the majority leaders in Congress pull together. And pulling together will have to consist of something more than sending a White House proposal to Congress with the expectation that key legislators will fall into line with it. Only full discussions and mutual concessions are likely to forge a policy that will command the loyalty of legislators. Unless the men in power in the executive and legislative branches are willing to approach the problem of internal security in this fashion, there is little hope that they can overcome the divide-and-rule tactics of the extremists.

Anti-Inflation Weapon

During the last year, says Chairman McCabe of the Federal Reserve Board, consumer indebtedness, including home mortgage loans, has increased by approximately 10 billion dollars. In other words, that much more money has been made available for spending through loans and credits obtained to buy goods and houses. The record is impressive proof of the need for restrictions on a type of credit that has the immediate effect of raising the prices of durable goods and houses bought on the installment plan.

The Federal Reserve Board is already preparing to stiffen the terms of its recent order intended to curb installment buying, and in cooperation with the Housing and Home Finance Administrator is getting ready to impose restriction on real estate credit. Real estate credit control is an innovation, and the board is said to be faced by some difficult problems that have delayed issuance of regulations. As in the case of installment credit curbs, however, the aim is the same: to reduce demands for critical materials needed for defense purposes and prevent price increases resulting from an expanding volume of consumer credit. Like the drive against deficit financing, which calls for higher taxes, credit control is an important anti-inflation weapon.

Eighty-First Congress

The Eighty-first Congress, which owes its political complexion largely to President Truman's Fair Deal campaign in 1948, will be remembered chiefly for its broad-gauged legislation to save the world from Communist aggression. Its energies have been largely devoted to foreign policy and national defense. While a number of specific blunders in these spheres are being lamented as Congress takes its election recess, it has on the whole faithfully reflected the will of the American people and given stout support to the foreign policies of the Administration. President Truman said last week that he was very pleased with its performance.

It was, of course, the world situation that diverted Congress from what seemed to be its principal tasks at the beginning of 1949 or even a year ago. For example, the drive to eliminate or reduce the wartime excise taxes gave way to almost unanimous support for the new $4,700,000,000 tax bill and a pledge to enact still more taxes when Congress comes back in November. Last January there were vehement demands for reduction of the President's $42,500,000,000 budget, but the war in Korea jarred Congress into appropriating about 60 billion dollars for the fiscal year of 1951, with more to come before next June. The defense fund of 14 billion dollars that was visualized before the Korean invasion was more than doubled before Congress closed its doors.

Congress was slow in voting economic controls after the new international crisis had removed all doubt as to the need for them. The control act that it finally passed is defective in some particulars, but it expresses a determination on the part of Congress to harness our economy to the requirements of a realistic international policy. The same awareness of realities was reflected in the extension of Selective Service, the drafting of doctors and the removal of the limits on the size of the armed forces. American aid to other countries has also been profoundly influenced by the naked resort to force in Korea. Marshall Plan funds were reduced to 2.5 billion dollars. Point 4 aid to underdeveloped areas became an accepted American program, with funds voted for a small beginning. But the emphasis went to military aid, with Congress voting 5.6 billion dollars for this purpose—largely for buttressing the defenses of our allies in western Europe.

In the sphere of domestic legislation an outstanding achievement was the new Social Security Act, which increased benefits to the aged and extended coverage to an estimated 10 million additional persons. Housing aids for middle-income families were extended, supplementing the slum-clearing program approved in 1949, but these undertakings have had to be curtailed because of the war. Aid to education was provided in the case of Government boom towns, but the deadlock holding up the general Federal grants for schools could not be broken. A vastly improved measure for admittance of displaced persons was enacted as was the National Science Foundation bill.

On many of the issues that stood out in the President's 1948 campaign the record is wholly barren. The Taft-Hartley Act remains unaltered. None of the civil rights measures about which the Administration has talked so much got through, not even the widely approved bills to grant statehood to Alaska and Hawaii and home rule to the District of Columbia. Health insurance continued to encounter a cold shoulder in both houses. Nor was there any warming up to the Brannan Plan—not even to the idea of a "trial run." The President vetoed a number of congressional acts, including the measures designed to exempt independent natural gas producers from regulation and legalize the basing-point system. And, of course, the differences between the President and Congress were given pointed emphasis by the votes of both houses in the last hours of the session to override his veto of the McCarran Communist-control bill.

In general there has been broad agreement on the main issues of foreign policy, despite the McCarthy episode. Hearty support for the Korea policy has come from both parties and the same is true of the measures for joint defense of the Atlantic area and economic recovery in Europe. With the accent of our times on foreign policy, these areas of agreement tend to obscure the continued conflict between the President and Congress. But the record shows that in the sphere of domestic legislation the President has had only a little more success with the Democratic Eighty-first Congress than he had with the Republican Eightieth.

Career Witness

An expanding economy constantly opens up new trades and professions to the industrious and enterprising. Consider, for example, the opportunities now presented to young men and women who have completed an appropriate internship in the Communist Party to serve as career witnesses for courts, loyalty boards, administrative tribunals, congressional committees and other inquisitorial bodies. There is a tremendous contemporary demand for their services as "experts." The work is easy if monotonous and is said to combine patriotism with private profit.

One such career witness, Mr. Joseph Kornfeder, appeared on Wednesday before the trial examiner appointed by the New York Board of Education to look into the case of an English teacher suspended from the city school system on a charge of Communist Party membership. Mr. Kornfeder, a native of Austria, admitted under cross-examination that he had testified under oath at a number of comparable hearings and court trials that he was born in Scranton, Pa. He said also that his "main occupation" since 1947 has been testifying about communism "at the customary expert witness fee of $25 a day, plus $10 daily expenses, plus railroad fare." The same rates, he "expected," would apply to his current appearance.

Mr. Kornfeder described his experiences as a member and officer of the Communist Party from 1919 to 1934 and identified 14 documents expressing the party's objectives of violent overthrow of the capitalist system. This could scarcely have been arduous work for so experienced a witness. It must not be supposed, however, that all is beer and skittles in the witnessing profession. Mr. Kornfeder was forced to undergo some embarrassment and discomfort—occupational hazards to which one might expect him by now to be inured—as a result of questioning by defense counsel which elicited from him the information that he had been an organizer of the Mosinee, Wis., anti-Communist celebration of last May and that he had used the name Joseph Zack as well as a variety of other aliases. He protested that he felt "insulted and irritated" by these questions.

But, of course, success in every career entails certain hardships. Those who would emulate Mr. Kornfeder must learn to take the bitter with the sweet. A certain degree of insensitivity may be required, but the calling is one that should appeal to every genuine yellow-blooded American. According to newspaper accounts, the hearing in New York will be resumed on Monday with Mr. Louis Budenz, former managing editor of the Daily Worker as second witness for the prosecution.

Assembly's New Role

Some coolness toward the United States' plan for resistance to aggression through the United Nations General Assembly is said to be evident among the delegates at Flushing Meadow. While there is widespread agreement among the representatives of the free world that something must be done to offset the deadlock in the Security Council, the French are reported to feel that a decision which might result in world war should not be left to the Assembly where each nation, no matter how large or small, has one vote. The British, too, appear to be reserving judgment. It is not surprising that the big powers are thinking very seriously about Secretary Acheson's proposal, for under it they would lose their power to veto the recommendation of military action.

There are, however, a number of safeguards in the Acheson plan. In case of aggression while the Security Council is hamstrung, the Assembly could be summoned into emergency session by the votes of seven members of the Security Council or by request of a majority of U. N. members. Under the latter alternative, some nation would have to initiate the move. A few small nations acting alone, would not likely win a majority of signatures to their petition against opposition from the big powers. And if they did so, they would then have to carry their demand for military action through the Assembly by a two-thirds vote, with full realization that the burden of carrying on such military operations might fall upon themselves. For in any event the Assembly can do no more than recommend sanctions against an aggressor. The United Nations military units which the Acheson plan calls for would remain under national control. In other words, if the Assembly should recommend action against an aggressor contrary to the wishes of Britain, France, or the United States, the dissenting country would be under no compulsion to support the decision with military force, although it would be under strong moral pressure to do so.

As a practical matter, the Assembly would be likely to take such drastic action only if the United States, Britain and France were in agreement and their decision had the overwhelming support of other U. N. members. If further restrictions upon Assembly action in this sphere are deemed desirable, however, they can doubtless be found. The privilege of calling the Assembly into emergency session on 24 hours notice might possibly be limited to the Security Council, acting by a majority of seven, leaving a majority of the Assembly free to summon special sessions on longer notice. With the present organization of the Council, this would mean that at least two of the permanent members would have to vote with the smaller powers represented on the Council to get the Assembly into session promptly.

The major question at present is not whether the Assembly's power in dealing with an aggressor can be properly restrained but whether it can be effectively mobilized. In working out the details the delegates will doubtless be mindful of the fact that the danger from no action at all would vastly outweigh any risk that the Assembly might abuse its powers.

THE UNRECORDED HOURS

How it is we grow in sleep we do not know,
But the down-drawing like dust settling
Of falling asleep sifts the evil underground.

Mark the souls calling hourly over sleep
To souls of others in companioned flight.
They gather purity out of the night
To melt below the eyelids of the blind.

Dews, that descend upon the sleepers, find
In hands palm-upward and in breast unbound
The dream gesturing of charity.

Guard it! Conversion that these moments keep—
Harshly relinquished when morning light
Burns the wet fields of all sleep.
Waking, hands must be sharp and cut day from night.

"Right Of Counsel"

I am sure that your paper is to be commended for the many causes that you have challenged in the past and those which you are constantly challenging every day of the year, and it is especially gratifying to note that the recent pronouncement of the Hon. George D. Neilson concerning the assignment of counsel to indigent defendants earned in your judgment something more than casual comment as a news item.

Your recent paragraph on the editorial page points up a problem which is a serious one in the courts here where defendants are many and available lawyers are few—that is, lawyers who are willing to represent these unfortunates whether they have funds or not.

I think that I reflect the sentiments of the entire bar when I say that in this great city of ours it should be the rule, without exception, that every defendant brought before our courts should be afforded the benefit of counsel at every stage of the proceedings, to insure that he or she will be denied no right incidental to the trial or hearing. Judge Neilson is to be commended and it is my hope that his associates on the bench will follow suit.

Your correspondent is a member of this bar and since his admission in May, 1948, has represented over 500 defendants by court assignment, and I can truthfully say that I am none the poorer for having done so, but to the contrary, I have gained a wealth of experience both in the law and in this business of "knowing your fellow man."

Home Rule

You are continually calling for District suffrage and indicate that it is something that the local people are entitled to as of right, with which I disagree.

This city was not created as a normal city is, by the effort of the local people. It was created out of the whole cloth as a seat of government. The only concern of the Government in creating this city was for Government operations. It was to be independent in all respects, so far as local matters were concerned, of any State and, I assume, of the ballyhooing of politics in the general sense.

The core of the population is the Government workers, and they should not be placed under local control. Most of them are here solely because of Government employment and desire to maintain their home political connections. They do not want to have to surrender them in order to protect their interests here. The Congress was given "exclusive" jurisdiction over the District, and has done a better job than most of the cities of the country, and if you think not, look around and compare some others with it, particularly in the matter of taxes, and you will have no cause to complain.

I suppose you are familiar enough with the statistics on the subject to know that where suffrage is general the percentage of those exercising it is very small in some areas, and it is usually exercised by the least competent to do so, and you would find that to be true here, also.

In any circumstance, this is not the city of the local people, and so far as its purpose is concerned, they have no claim that can be put forth based on any legal grounds, and its peace and quiet should not be disturbed, as some capital cities have been, by the disturbances incident to the hurly-burly of politics. I am sure that suffrage would not exist for five years before there would be a revulsion, as in a former time, and we need no more experiments in that direction.

Unworthy Pattern

In attacking the Sesquicentennial Commission, Mr. Waller, of the Bloomingdale Civic Association, is sidestepping the true culprits in the recent appalling demonstration of intolerance—the banning of a mixed cast of performers from "Faith of Our Fathers" who were to appear before our high schools: namely, the principal of Anacostia High School, who first set the example of unchristian, undemocratic procedure. And the superintendent of schools who, although admitting that he knew no "rules" keeping colored entertainers from such appearances, said he would back her.

Mr. Waller is right in one respect. This is indeed a "time when our high school students are falling together, regardless of race, on the battlefield in the cause of freedom—" not only for another nation, as he states, but in the cause of freedom and charity right here at home. It is therefore all the more ironic that two people in a position of leadership before our children, two people to whom this coming generation looks for guidance and behavior worth emulating, should choose instead such a bigoted and unworthy pattern.

Our daughter is one of the white members of the cast of this magnificent production. Throughout the long weeks of rehearsals and of performances, a real comradeship has existed between the entire company, regardless of race. But always on a dignified, mutually respectful, decent American basis. If Mr. Waller cares to blame anyone, let him blame all these fine, loyal, white youngsters who, upon learning that their colored co-workers would be banned from appearing in a patriotic drama in a public American school, refused to go on without them. Personally, I'm terribly proud of them!

"Faith Of Our Fathers"

No wonder the sesquicentennial drama, "Faith of Our Fathers," is in the red. The policy of pricing the show completely out of reach of great sections of our population could result in nothing else. Why do we continue to make this exasperating, and even disgusting, mistake? It is a great show. It should be seen by everybody in this land. It inspires and reactivates our faith in our land. But it is restricted by high admission prices, reserved as it is for people with money.

Consider what it costs a man with a family to see the show. Even at 90 cents general admission, his wife and two children and he spend $3 to $3.60. If he would like better seats he pays $9.60. Do the planners ever add up these figures? Do they purposely force the average man to stay away from this kind of a show and drive him to the neighborhood movie where he can show his family the inspiring antics of Bob Hope or Roy Rogers for a mere $1.50?

Then, piled on this high cost is the "midway" atmosphere that prevails—the apparent effort to bleed the visitor of as much money in one visit as possible. Parking is 50 cents, and the police have seen to it that no free parking exists within a mile. There's the old souvenir program gag; the hot dogs are 15 cents; hot chocolate (flavored with cardboard) is 20 cents. And there are pennants, flags, dolls—just like the county fair midway.

Segregation

The refusal of a local high school to allow a group of players from the Washington Sesquicentennial pageant to appear on its stage because two members of the group were Negroes certainly achieved a new height, or depth, of absurdity. Carried to its logical conclusion, it would mean that the superintendent of schools, who happens to be a white man, could not make a talk before the pupils of one of the schools for Negroes if he was accompanied by one of the Negro assistant superintendents. And of course there would be no more "embarrassing" occasions, at the commencement exercises of a Negro school, in which a Negro principal or assistant superintendent hands the diplomas to the white superintendent of schools or to a white member of the Board of Education, who in turn presents them to the Negro graduates. Or is such a terrible thing as that prohibited already?

Perhaps only absurdities will reveal the basic absurdity of the segregation principle.

Inflation Clauses

Only the slightest degree of sophistication of thought is necessary to realize that rising wages are not per se inflationary, that rising prices and wages are symptoms of inflationary forces abroad in the economy; but that medicating the symptom rarely cures the patient.

Price and wage inflation occur when the supply of money in the economy increases faster than the increase in quantity of goods, as the familiar monetary equation demonstrates. It occurs when a government pays its way by printing money, or by deficit financing in excess of the available volume of savings. It occurs when greedy consumers devote their savings to hoards of consumers goods; when business withholds goods from the market in anticipation of shortages and higher prices; when business demands for investible funds to finance speculative inventory investment plus normal investment outruns lagging or declining savings. Then it is that credit is extended, the volume increases, the volume of goods in the market declines, and prices are bid up in an inflationary spiral.

It's true that if profits coming from increased prices were paid to stockholders rather than to wage earners, the propensity to consume perhaps might fall and savings catch up with investment more quickly. But increased wages are not paid from extended bank credit; they don't increase the supply of money available to buy goods. Increased wages are merely labor's share in the distribution of an increased national income; they are payments out of current receipts for present productive services as they are then valued on the market. The harvest of inflationary increases in the money supply has already been reaped as higher prices or increased sales before wages are increased. When the production of war goods begins to bite into consumer goods production, and labor shortages appear, then wage controls will be needed to prevent labor from taking an unfair share in the distribution of income. But even then, inflation must be laid at other doors.

Letter Economy

It is suggested that as a saving for the war effort it become customary and courteous to omit "Dear Sir" and "Yours very truly," from all letter writing. As a matter of fact, it smacks of the middle ages.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Crossing The Han

WITH THE MARINES ON THE SEOUL FRONT — The crossing of the Han was the prelude, potentially as risky as any amphibious operation, to the final attack on Seoul. The prelude to the crossing of the Han was a bitter cold night on the hard, cold ground of Kimpo Airfield, interrupted by intimations of danger and disaster.

The commander of Easy Company, Capt. Samuel Jaskilka, had been called from his brief sleep to be told that the regimental reconnaissance company had been cut to pieces, after swimming across the Han River in the dark night hours. In the pale, chilly dawn, with only this information on its stomach, Easy Company marched off to the assembly area, to board the waiting amphibious tractors.

The amtracs were lined up on either side of a road about a mile from the airfield. Captain Jaskilka skillfully threaded his way through the inevitable muddle of any big operation and got his men aboard the huge, lumbering steel boat-vehicles, Clammy C rations were opened, The breakfasting men watched another company of the battalion pass by, headed for the river.

JASKILKA and his platoon commanders went over the day's plan. "It's one of those operations," said Jaskilka, "where a lot of decisions are going to have to be made on the spot, so keep your men well under control." In the long delay that always precedes any military jump-off, gunner Sergt. Robert W. Barnett admonished the men to "for God's sake keep down and keep off the skyline."

Suddenly the column of amtracs bumped off toward the river—a long, hard, rough ride. Now, before it was known what was to come, was the moment of greatest tension. In this moment, very naturally if you think about it, the talk was about simple, familiar things—children and others at home, good times had and hoped for, sweethearts and wives and little houses in California beach towns. The mood lasted until the amtrac clumsily turned into the river valley itself, disclosing only broad mud flats, a wide, muddy stream, a thatched village in flames, and rice paddies and eroded hills on the other shore.

The men in the amtrac straightened from their crouched positions and abandoned the simple past in favor of more recent reminiscence of girls in Osaka and Kobe. While the amtrac wallowed across the river, and lumbered inland, lightheartedness ruled. Then the second assembly area was reached at last—a little, hill-encircled amphitheater of bean and millet patches, with another village where the people offered fruit and water. The men of Easy Company shouldered their heavy packs, grasped their well-oiled weapons, and set off to do the day's work.

The long file of men, which somehow you can never see without remembering the phrase "an army with banners," wound its way through rice paddies, across a threshing floor, along the main railroad tracks. The march was long. The sun was bright and hot. There was some small arms fire from the hills. But Easy Company did not pause until within sight of its final goal, the range of almost mountainous heights that rise from the suburbs of Seoul. There was a halt to reconnoiter and to lay mortar fire on the crests. Then, by late afternoon, Easy Company had taken its objectives, rounded up its quota of naked, scrawny prisoners, and was engaged in a brisk fight with pockets of the enemy nearer to the city.

The night was bleak. The radios failed, as our wretched communications equipment always seems to do when it is most needed. Even patrols could not precisely tell whether the company's forward platoon had come down off the highest ground to protect the rear. The North Korean forces uplimbered their artillery and occasionally a shrill incoming whistle and loud neighboring explosion would indicate that Easy Company's positions were being gone over. Again the cold was very bitter, and at first light the men of Easy Company seemed downright glad to clamber stiffly out of their well-dug foxholes.

There had been the usual infiltration, and there was the usual exchange of fire—a sharp, pre-breakfast rattle—with the infiltrators. On the highest hill crest, not long before occupied by the forward platoon, enemy movements were suddenly observed by gunner Sergt. Barnett. It was a hard decision, for this crest was the main objective, yet it was only almost, but not absolutely sure, that the forward platoon had obeyed its orders to move to the rear. After he had studied the crest through his glasses, Capt. Jaskilka's face suddenly hardened. The artillery, the mortars, the air were down upon the naked peak. The company's remaining two platoons rapidly moved out to re-occupy the lost ground.

IT WAS A LONG, lung-testing climb. Just as the Marines reached the peak, word came that the forward platoon, lost in the blackness of the night, had been found again on a hill beyond the one allotted to it. The casualty reports of the previous 24 hours were made—of the company's few score, two men had been rather badly wounded and were being carried back by the stretcher bearers. The men of Easy Company, who all recalled the bloody fights of the southern beach head, wondered at the enemy's new subtleness.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Our Global Policy

DURING THE past fortnight Mr. Acheson has taken the initiative in Europe, in Japan, and in the United Nations. He has put forward a plan for the defense of Europe, a plan for a peace treaty with Japan, and a plan to bypass the Soviet veto and to mobilize collective military forces against aggression.

Lippmann

A crucial element, indeed the essential element, in each of these plans is that there is to be an American force especially earmarked for the purpose of that plan. The European policy calls for additional American divisions in Germany—somewhere between five and ten. The proposed Japanese treaty calls for American forces adequate to defend Japan. Our proposals in the United Nations call for American units "to be especially trained and equipped and continuously maintained in readiness for prompt service on behalf of the United Nations." Although the three American programs have been put forward separately, they must all—presumably—have first been considered together in the National Security Council. If they haven't been, they will be. For they will all draw from the same pool: from the supply of trained and equipped ground troops which the post-Korean military effort will produce.

QUITE EVIDENTLY this country will be able to station in Japan and in Germany only small forces as compared with the Red Army, its satellite or allied armies. It is not, however, necessary to think of this thin screen of American troops as intended to be, or as pretending to be, a match for the armed hordes of the Eurasian continent. As against the Red Army the function of these American troops is—in the old but accurate metaphor—to be the plate glass window of the jewelry shop.

To smash the window will make enough noise to set in motion automatically the offensive forces of this country. For this purpose, to bring to bear immediately and without hesitation the offensive striking power of the United States, it does not make too much difference whether the plate glass window is a little bit thicker or not. I have heard it argued—only, I hasten to say, in order to illustrate a principle—if what our friends abroad are really worried about is whether the United States will go to war promptly and ardently enough if they are attacked, they should ask for a frontier guard of American Wacs.

But the American forces in Germany and Japan have another function besides acting as a screen against the Red Army. That is to provide enough power to maintain law and order against insurrection and subversion, and against intervention by satellites,—while the military reconstruction of Europe and Japan is carried out.

THAT IS also, I should suppose, the meaning of our proposals to the U. N. They are designed for secondary forms of aggression in which the forces of the Soviet Union itself are not engaged. For if the Soviet Union decides to go to war with its own forces, the veto will be the last and the least of our worries. What Mr. Acheson has, I assume, been worrying about are places like Korea, Greece, Iran, Indo-China, and Yugoslavia. Provided that the Soviet Union itself does not intervene, "collective security" organized by the non-Soviet nations should be sufficient to deal with local aggression, and in most cases even to deter it and to prevent it.

THE WHOLE structure of security, as it is envisaged by Mr. Acheson's recent proposals, stands on the basic assumption that Stalin is not, like another Hitler, intending soon to go to war for the military conquest of the world—if for no other reason than that he respects the ultimate military power of the United States. Paradoxical as it may seem, the fact of the matter is that the creation of adequate European defenses, the organization of a European army, the revival of Japan's power to defend herself, the thwarting of local aggression—all of them depend on preventing the armed truce with the Soviet Union from breaking down into open hostilities.

It is necessary to construct European defenses. It is necessary to end the defenselessness of Japan. It is necessary to prevent satellite aggression in Central Europe, in the Balkans, the Middle East, and Southeast Asia. But all these necessary and expensive undertakings, though they are usually advertised as measures against Russian aggression, are in fact impossible to carry through unless, by the combined diplomacy and power of the United States, we can make sure that Russia does not commit the aggression that, nominally, these measures are designed to meet.

WHAT IN reality, then, is the purpose of all these undertakings? Their purpose is to reconstruct a society of independent, though collaborating nations,—more specifically to revive the power of Europe and of Japan so that we and they can look forward to a time when they no longer have to choose between the domination of Russia and being dependents of the United States.

Republican Line-up Is Changed By Taft's Decision on 1952

international and domestic importance.

Whatever the post, Stassen's associates say it is safe to predict he won't remove himself from the 1952 Presidential running.

If the 1948 convention, with all the big names present, saw a second-to-none GOP battle royal for the nomination, party strategists say the indicated Taft and Dewey exit will only intensify the fight they waged formerly in the open.

Dewey's last-minute decision to run again for Governor merely points up his determination to be a factor in a convention that may well decide the fate of his party, now nearly 20 years out of power.

Taft, even though he withdraws as a contender, will be under more pressure than ever to maneuver backstage to retain the Republican party's conservative hue.

To be convinced that Taft really meant it when he said he is through running for the Presidency, friends say you have to know Taft and the intimate team of "Bob and Martha."

'Bob and Martha' a Team

Martha Taft, now quite ill, has been the sparkplug behind Bob Taft's Presidential ambitions. Until her recent sickness, they always have campaigned together, with Martha quite as effective on the stump as Bob himhelf, and more incisively witty.

Her illness has taken a lot of starch out of Bob, and he's tired of campaigning alone. Actually, he lost any real zest to continue his fight for the Presidency after the 1948 Republican convention. In post-convention confidence he told friends he wanted only one more term in the Senate, and then he was "through."

Until Martha Taft's sickness, associates put it down as temporary gloom over the convention results. But when he repeated as much in the thick of his Senate race they no longer had any doubts.

Taft seldom has done the "expedient" to help himself out of a politically tight spot. His reputation for, saying what he thinks, come hell or high water, is legend. For example, his recent unpopular attack on popular George Marshall, could very well cost him re-election.

In foreswearing any 1952 candidacy, Taft did leave himself one "out," however, and much has been made of that. In event of any "great movement" for him, without any campaign by himself to bring it about, he told friends he would, of course, reconsider.

But Presidential nominations don't come that way. Under Ohio law, they can't come that way. To get his hat in the ring as Ohio's favorite son he would have to announce his intention to run 90 days in advance of Ohio's 1952 Presidential primary, and actively seek the post.

Moreover, as a prelude to any draft movement he certainly would have to sweep Ohio in the November Senatorial race and at least make some showing in such labor strongholds as Akron and Youngstown.

Nothing in the neck-and-neck race between himself and Ohio's Joe Ferguson indicates such a sweep. On the contrary, Taft may be fortunate to squeak through.

If he fails to do that, the whole question of his 1952 Presidential availability would be academic anyway.

Democrats Join Republicans Inside New Book

CHICAGO, Sept. 24 (AP).—Democrats and Republicans by the thousands got together today—in a new book.

The 955-page volume bears the title "Who's Who in United States Politics and American Political Almanac."

It is a reference work. It contains biographies of more than 5000 Democrats, some 5000 Republicans and hundreds of members of other parties, including Socialist, American Labor, Progressive and Prohibition groups.

The book gives names, addresses, family backgrounds and business, military and political records of the biographees.

It was published by Capitol House, Inc., of Chicago.

It is dedicated as follows:

"To the American politician, frequently abused, infrequently praised, but the backbone of the greatest Nation on earth."

the afternoon. Some persons sighting weird red and yellow colorings in the sky feared an atomic bomb had fallen. Some thought it was the end of the world. Others prayed. Ships on the Great Lakes were slowed.

Big-league baseball games in Cleveland and Pittsburgh were played under lights. The smoke blanket extended from Toronto, where the smoke was the thickest, as far south as Fairmont, W. Va. Michigan was blanketed.

Darkness fell almost an hour early over New York's Great White Way.

Weathermen said the smoke combined with unusual weather conditions to achieve the peculiar effect. The boundaries of the smoke bank extended west to Iowa.

Three fourths of Pennsylvania was mantled. Pilots were forced down by "huge clouds of thick yellow smoke." Street lights were turned on.

Panic was reported in southern Ontario. Police switchboards were swarmed with calls from frightened persons who had heard rumors that an atomic bomb had exploded. Some believed a third world war had started. Some began praying, believing the return of Christ was at hand.

Trans-Canada Airlines said their Toronto office messaged that fires in northern Alberta caused smoke to drift at 10,000 to 15,000 feet from northern Alberta east to Hudson Bay, then veer southward all the way from Vancouver, British Columbia, on the west coast, to Cleveland.

The Winnipeg weather bureau said it also believed northern Alberta fires were responsible.

Trans-Canada said its pilots reported visibility was zero in the smoke areas at altitudes below 15,000 feet while above the smoke clouds the sun shone brightly.

the treetop, so I slipped out and slid down to the ground like on a fireman's pole and waited about 1½ or 2 hours until the rescuers found me walking on the beach.

"I didn't have a scratch," he declared, smiling broadly.

On the television program, Secretary Finletter, without mentioning the flight, emphasized the need for keeping "clearly alert to developing better planes, better weapons and better trained personnel."

He said that even with 69 groups, the Air Force could not become complacent. He warned that "even a successful ending of the Korean war must not give us a false sense of security" as long as the "basic tensions between the Communists and the free world" continue.

General Vandenberg said some enemy atomic bombers would be bound to get through to American cities in any determined air attack.

Even a greatly expanded United States Air Force, he said, "could never guarantee" absolute security from an A-bombing. He said the experience of World War II proves that some planes in a striking force can always get through to the target.

Bureau Chief Is Slain, Agent Shot in Dope Raid

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 24 (AP).—The chief of the U. S. Narcotics Bureau for the Minneapolis area was shot dead and one of his agents seriously wounded today in a raid on an opium den two blocks from St. Paul police headquarters. Four men were arrested, one of them wounded critically.

Dead is A. M. Bangs, 50. Shot under the heart was Agent Joseph Winberg, 27. Also wounded was John Wong, 49, who lives in the apartment hotel, scene of the raid. Thirteen shots were fired.

Party Blasted By Labor MP On Pool Stand

LONDON, Sept. 24 (AP).—A Labor member of Parliament accused the leaders of his own party today of trying to scuttle the Schuman Plan because they want Britain to "remain in glorious isolation and independence."

R. W. G. MacKay, a member of the British delegation to the recent Council of Europe meeting at Strasbourg, made the attack in a sizzling political pamphlet called "Heads in the Sand."

MacKay's attack may be the forerunner of a bitter intraparty struggle for power, which is expected to erupt into the open at the Labor Party's annual congress opening at Margate on October 3.

The British Press Association said MacKay's criticism was so vigorous that he was likely to be called before the national executive committee on Wednesday to explain.

Political observers already were predicting a struggle between party moderates and a left-wing clique at Margate despite Prime Minister Attlee's efforts to keep the lid on.

Health Minister Aneurin Bevan, boss of the ultra-Socialist wing of the party, is clashing with Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison. Bevan favors calling another general election almost at once in the hope of improving Labor's nominal seven-vote margin in Commons.

Attlee publicly backed party strategist Morrison in a speech at Sheffield Saturday when he indicated he does not favor an autumn election.

Mackay attacked the national executive committee's statement on "European Unity" issued June 12. The statement explained Britain's refusal to participate in the proposal to pool western Europe's coal and steel production.

Recalling that Attlee told the House of Commons that the declaration did not necessarily represent government views, Mackay said it "represents the views of Ministers of the British government who would like Britain to remain in glorious isolation and independence, and would like to see the Council of Europe die."

Red Author Says Truman Is Hypocrite

MOSCOW, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Mikhail Sholokhov, the Soviet Union's most famous living novelist, castigated President Truman today in a bitter full-page profile in Pravda under the headline "The executioners will not escape the judgment of the peoples."

Sholokhov quoted Mr. Truman's pronouncements on the use of the atom bomb and on Korean policy and likened the President to Adolf Hitler, Heinrich Himmler and other Nazi and Fascist war criminals.

Sholokhov paid tribute to the American people in the Communist Party publication thus:

"The Soviet people always have regarded and continue to regard the American working people with respect. Our Stalin once praised American efficiency. But what was then meant was efficiency of labor. And now, all honest humanity, condemning murderers, indignantly views the cynical cold bloodedness of the American fliers destroying the peaceful Korean population.

"In the course of their relatively brief history the American people created tens of millions of honest toilers and outstanding men in the field of politics, science, technology, art and literature. Their names are recalled respectfully, not only by Americans, but by all grateful mankind.

"But there is a name in current American life which is pronounced with growing indignation and hatred by all honest people in the entire world—President Harry Truman.

"He is the man with the thin, merciless lips, with the Jesuitical face who first dispatched planes carrying atom bombs to Japan. Even now he unsqueamishly says, 'I will not hesitate again to use the atom bomb if necessary.'

"Truman will always find it necessary and if he does not his immediate bosses in Wall Street will prompt him," Sholokhov commented.

"Truman is the personification of human baseness past and present," Sholokhov wrote. "This contemptible hypocrite of the White House does not begin, does not end one single public speech without mentioning God's name, thus unscrupulously speculating on the religious feelings of America's simple people. With unheard-of shamelessness he advertises his own religious 'virtue,' eagerly telling the press how he nightly spends an hour in solitary prayer for peace for all the world."

Dark—for younger men

Youngsters at school or college prefer a dark grey flannel suit. It is more practical than the lighter shades. We have considered this—and the parents' budgets—and have asked our makers for a reasonably priced, good quality, long wearing suit.

The suit is the traditional three button model, is nicely styled and — at the price — of exceptional value.

WASHINGTON joins the BIG TEN

Congratulations to Washington on joining the big ten among American cities! A decade ago the census placed Washington eleventh, but now the Nation's Capital is officially ninth with a population of 792,234, while metropolitan Washington has 1,452,349 people.

Greater size means increasing responsibilities for those who serve the people of our city. The Union Trust Company is well aware of its obligation to provide complete and efficient banking services to increasing numbers of corporations, businesses and individuals. Today it is truer than ever before that character and ability to repay are the best collateral at this bank.

Like Washington, the Union Trust has shown splendid growth in the last ten years. This is indicated by the fact that our total resources, which in 1940 amounted to $17,446,924, have increased threefold to the present $51,144,659.

Perhaps you, too, would find the friendly banking services of the Union Trust Company to your liking. May we welcome you soon?

Doctor, Dentist Call Seen by December

The Defense Department plans to begin calling up Government-trained medical men not later than the first of December to fill the need for 2000 doctors and 500 dentists.

Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of the department's office of medical services, said the total number of draftees would depend on the number of volunteers who sign up between now and then.

He indicated that a White House proclamation is expected this week which would set the registration date around the middle of October. The Defense Department, Dr. Meiling said, requested an immediate registration two days after the doctor draft law was passed earlier this month.

The department hopes to get the first batch of draftees entirely from among the Priority 1 classification set up by the draft law. This includes men who trained during the war, either at their own or Government expense, but who did not see active duty.

This group, however, would not be sufficient to supply the additional 7000 doctors and 3500 dentists who will be needed by June 30,1951, to support the planned 2½-million man force, Dr. Meiling declared.

The estimated needs also include specialists of long experience who would not be found among young, recently trained doctors. These, he said, would have to come from either the reserves or the lower draft classifications.

Novel Water Music Played At Gallery

By Paul Hume

Richard Bales and the National Gallery Orchestra brought an important novelty to town last night.

Their opening program in the East Garden Court consisted of familiar music by Schubert and some American Revolutionary tunes arranged by Bales.

The item commanding chief attention was the Water Music of Handel. One of the oldest pieces in current orchestral repertoires, Handel's music is usually heard in suites lasting about 15 minutes.

Through the courtesy of the Fleischer collection in Philadelphia, the entire set of 21 numbers in the original score was made available to Bales.

The sense of the music is known to all concert lovers. Its essence is fully conveyed in the familiar excerpts. Yet it was interesting to hear the whole panoply of contrasting movements paraded before the ear.

Handel's sense of color, displayed in his use of horns, oboes and woodwinds, is a remarkable thing for his time and place—early eighteenth century England.

Unfortunately, Bales had 15 strings in his orchestra—but only five woodwinds. Handel was far more accustomed to almost equal numbers of the two groups. The performance had its moments of sheen and life, when the strings played in tune and wind instruments phrased with precision and elegance.

However, as the same kind of music kept coming for 45 minutes, often much too slowly paced, and technically sloppy, it became more and more apparent that Handel was wise to write his suite for open-air use on the Thames and not for a seated audience in a concert hall.

His genius was unique, as his music is. The radio comment during the intermission is to be rebuked for the foolish generalizations that made up most of the remarks.

When reviving music of high historical importance, we should have more of the real spirit in performance and more factual history and evaluation in the footnotes.

Relics 'Prove' Asia-Alaska Migration

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24 (AP). Discovery of the first proof of prehistoric migration across the Bering Straits from Asia to Alaska was announced today by the University of Pennsylvania Museum.

Dr. Froelich G. Rainey, museum director, said his associates on the "largest archeological expedition ever sent to the Arctic" had found relics of what may be the earliest human settlements in North America.

The discoveries were described as perhaps the first reliable evidence substantiating the old theory that the inhabitants of this continent were primitive Nomads who crossed the Bering Straits in the Stone Age.

Exactly how far back the relics date will be determined soon, Dr. Rainey said, by a new system of radioactive carbon analysis at the nuclear laboratories of the University of Chicago.

Between 2000 and 3000 objects have been brought to the University Museum here from excavation sites in northwest Alaska. Most of them are finely chiseled parts of stone tools and weapons. But some are specimens of carbon's radioactive isotype, carbon 14, which appears in every living being, Dr. Rainey said.

The radioactive relics include bits of charcoal from the fires of prehistoric Alaskans and fragments of reindeer antlers and charred animal bones.

When the Chicago tests are completed within a few weeks, Dr. Rainey said, the archeologists will know whether they have found traces of the earliest North Americans.

White House Statement On Hoffman Due Today

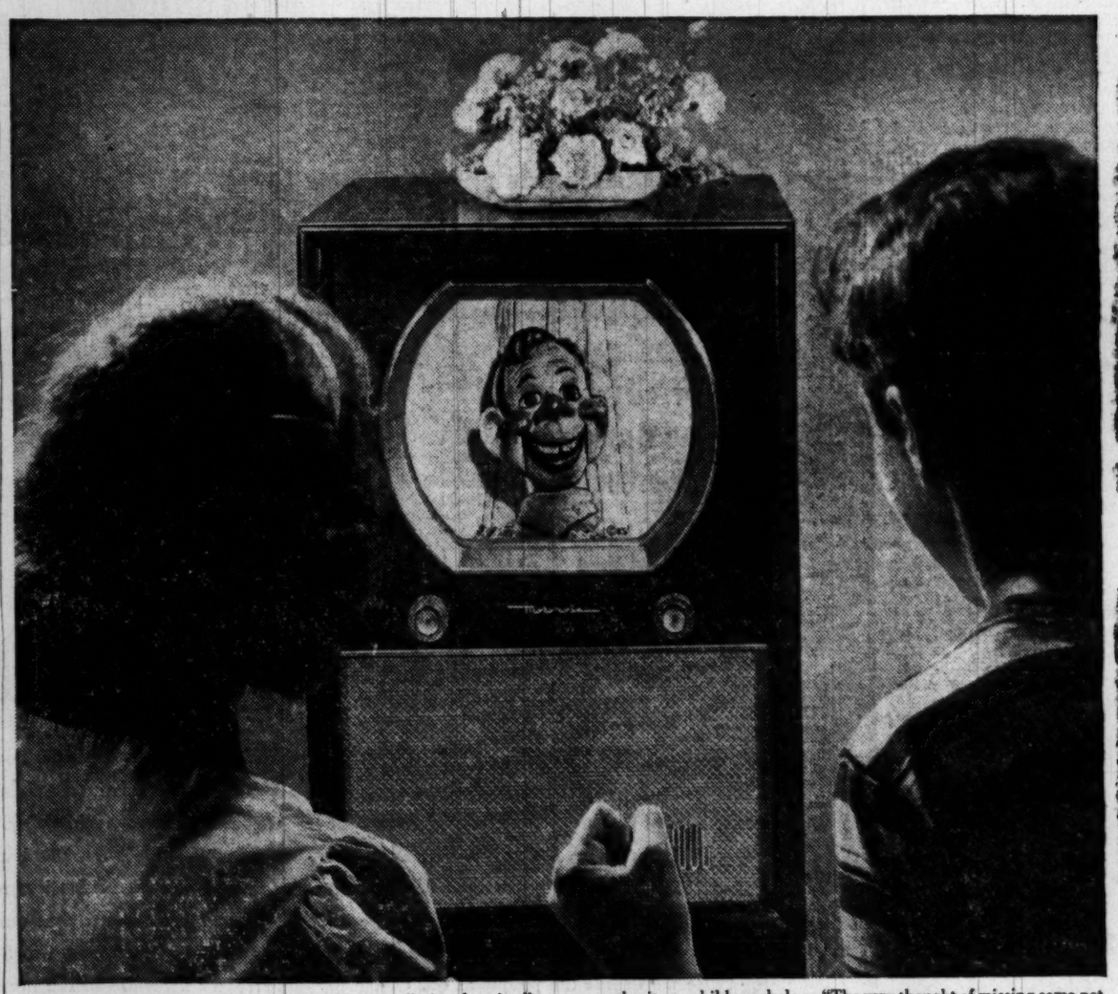
HOW TELEVISION BENEFITS YOUR CHILDREN

OWN A Motorola AND YOU KNOW YOU OWN THE BEST

Motorola, leader in television, shows how TV can mean better behavior at home and better marks in school!



Home, sweet TV home! Peace! Quiet! No more "rainy day riots"... with television keeping small fry out of mischief . . . and out of mother's hair. And that's just one of many TV blessings. "Taking away television from children who 'act up' is a punishment that really works," writes an authority on child psychology. "The very thought of missing some pet program turns little lions into lambs. And, incidentally, those favorite programs in the late afternoon are the world's finest magnet for getting tardy youngsters home on time for dinner."

Gets homework done—promptly! The simple rule "Homework first—television second" has solved the homework problem in thousands of homes . . . has actually made children more interested in school work. "Television," says the New York Times, "can be enjoyed in healthy moderation in the same way as sports or movie-going, but only the mother and father can make certain this will be the case."

Strengthens family ties! Educators, religious and social workers all agree that TV is a strong force for bringing parents and children together to enjoy clean, wholesome entertainment right in the home.

No eyestrain! The Journal of the American Medical Association states, "Television in itself does not produce eyestrain." If television seems to tire a child's eyes, probable answer is—he needs an eye examination.

Motorola's leadership in cabinet design as well as performance is recognized with the 1950 Fashion Academy Gold Medal Award. Typical example of Motorola supremacy is this Table Model 17T3. Clear, steady 16" picture, only 2 simple controls, Built-in-Antenna, price only $219.95. View it at your dealers along with other beautiful Motorola models from $189.95 to $650. Then let a Motorola demonstration in your home show you how much TV enjoyment can benefit your own children.

Yanks Beat Bosox; Tigers Lose in 10th on Robinson's Boner; Green Bay Laces Redskins, 35-21; First Loss in Seven Games

ROBINSON MAKES A COSTLY BLUNDER—Cleveland's Bob Lemon slides across home plate, unmolested, with the winning run in the tenth inning to defeat Detroit's pennant hopeful Tigers, 2-1. Tiger Catcher Aaron Robinson had the ball in plenty of time, but he failed to tag Lemon, thinking all he had to do was touch the plate for a forceout. The play occurred with the bases loaded when Cleveland's Luke Easter grounded out to First Baseman Don Kolloway. The force was thus eliminated. Kolloway threw to Robinson, whose foot was on the plate. Lemon was declared out and then safe

Rob Goode Runs 80 Yds. For Favored Washington

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 24.—Savage Green Bay burst the Washington Redskins' bubble with a bruising 35-21 victory here today before a sparse gathering of 14,109.

The scorned 20-point underdogs who weren't supposed to have recovered from a 45-7 trouncing by Detroit last week took a full measure of revenge on previously unbeaten Washington.

After sweeping five exhibitions, the Redskins walked over the Baltimore Colts, 38-14, in their National Football League opener last week and had every expectation of taking their seventh straight victory today.

Green Bay soon dispelled the illusion, literally fighting the Redskins off their feet. It was that grit that more than matched three spectacular long-scoring plays by the Redskins and the wide margin they held, statistically.

Goode Runs 80 Yards

Washington scored on a 44-yard touchdown pass from Sammy Baugh to Howie Livingston and one for 74 yards to Howie by Harry Gilmer. Rob Goode contributed a history-making 80-yard run for the other score.

That run of Goode's was the longest ever made by a Redskin from scrimmage. You have to go back to 1937 for that previous record held by Cliff Battles, a 75-yard dash.

Goode was about the only Redskin making any history. After Baugh's toss put the Redskins in front after six minutes of the game, Washington was engaged in a futile pursuit. At one time, the Redskins trailed, 35-14.

Early in the game, the Redskins were looking the part of an undefeated club. Baugh's neat toss to Livingston culminated a march that started on the Washington 18.

Packers Grab Fumble, Score

But the spirited Packers came back for two quick scores early in the second period to go in front for good. They seized every opportunity the outrushed Redskins gave them.

First came when Goode took Baugh's short pass on the Washington 21 but fumbled when hit simultaneously by Carl Schuette. It was a jarring tackle and you couldn't blame Goode who hardly had a grip on the ball.

Paul Christman, the old Chicago Cardinal who just joined the Packers a few days ago, tied matters with a pass that Ted Cook cut over and took on the six between Herb Siegert and Harry Gilmer. Cook kept on going. Two plays previously the same Cook dropped a Christman toss in the end zone.

Green Bay had its second score two minutes later when Speedy Billy Grimes took a high punt from Bill Dudley on his 15 and sprinted 85 yards. Guard Cas Witucki had an easy shot to drop him in his tracks right on the 15 but missed. Only Dudley, the kicker, got another shot, missing a shoestring tackle on the Redskin 40.

The Redskins came back on a 79-yard march that faltered on the Green Bay five and ended abortively when Bill Dudley missed a 14-yard field goal attempt before the end of the half.

Baugh pitched them all the way and might have tied it but Clyde Goodnight juggled and dropped a pass in the end zone.

It was about that time the Redskins declared themselves out.

Seven minutes after intermission, the Packers increased their lead to 21-7. A poor punt by Dudley rolled to the Redskin 41 and Bill Boedeker returned it to the 32.

Grimes lost a yard when hit by Paul Lipscomb, who played a brilliant game at tackle in an otherwise undistinguished Washington line. Another exception was Guard John Badaczewski.

Grimes Goes Over

The line wasn't responsible for the next play. Rookie Tobin Rote threw a 31-yard pass that End Al Baldwin took out of bounds on the Redskin two. Grimes hurdled the Redskin forward wall for the touchdown.

That might have settled matters but 20 seconds later, Goode went on that 80-yard jaunt without being touched.

Tatum said last night, "I have to think hard to remember who Gardner is. Now, I do remember. He called me for an interview a while back, and said he was doing a complimentary story on colorful Oklahoma and its love of football.

"I gave him a story, but he twisted my quotes around.

"First, I didn't throw my money around at Oklahoma.

"Second, Noble didn't interfere in my program. He was influential, and I know that he didn't want me as football coach, but he

Lemon Scores for 2-1 Triumph

Catcher Has Ball But Fails to Tag Runner

By Joe Reichler

CLEVELAND, Sept. 24 (AP).—A mental lapse by Detroit Catcher Aaron Robinson, one that may go into the books as one of baseball's costliest boners, gave the Cleveland Indians a breath-taking, 2-1, victory over the Tigers today, dealing Detroit's pennant hopes a staggering blow.

Aaron Robinson

Robinson's blunder of failing to tag a runner, comparable to Fred Merkle's failure to touch second base back in 1908, and Mickey Owens' muff of a third strike in 1941 World Series, presented the Indians with the winning run in the bottom half of the tenth inning.

Bob Lemon scored the winning run after first being declared out on what Robinson thought was a routine force out at home.

Robinson's rock came about this way:

Cleveland had the bases loaded with one out. Luke Easter hit a grounder to First Baseman Don Kolloway on the line.

Kolloway, who could easily have made a force play at the plate preferred to step on first for the second out, thereby nullifying the force play.

He then whipped the ball to Robinson, making a perfect throw to the third base side of the plate.

The catcher, who appeared to have plenty of time to make the tag on the sliding Lemon, simply stamped on the plate to signify a double play had been completed. Lemon appeared still to be 8 or 10 feet away from the plate.

All press box observers agreed that Lemon would have been an easy out if he had been tagged. Robinson made no move to tag Lemon.

Had Kolloway thrown to the plate instead of touching first base, it is problematical whether Robinson could have returned the throw in time to double up Easter.

The play not only fooled the Detroit receiver but plate Umpire Bill Summers as well. The senior arbiter, serving his eighteenth season in the American League, jerked up his right thumb to signify that the third out had been completed.

The entire Cleveland bench, realizing that Kolloway's touching of first base nullified a force at the plate, rushed Summers to explain that Lemon had to be tabbed in order to be declared out. First Base Umpire Charley Berry backed up this logic. Summers,

Champions Lead by 2½; Williams Has Two Homers

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—On this happy day for the Yankees and their 67,827 Stadium fans they landed a Sunday punch that virtually knocked the Red Sox out of the pennant race.

They beat the swooning Sox, 9 to 5, and then were doubly blessed when the score board showed the second-place Tigers had taken a beating at Cleveland. Before them now is an open road to, the pennant, with delightful downhill features.

Today the Yankees were opening a 2½-game lead over Detroit, and bolting four games ahead of the fading Bostons, with only eight games remaining on their schedule.

The standings after today's alterations:

	W.	L.	G.B.
New York	93	53
Detroit	91	56	2½
Boston	89	57	4

The developments placed the champions in almost unassailable position as they go into two double-headers against Washington here tomorrow and Tuesday.

By any combination of six they will beat out Detroit, and by any combination of five the Red Sox are dead ducks. That is, any combination of Yankee wins or Detroit losses that adds up to six means the race is over. Or, the Bombers can clinch it by winning six of their eight remaining games, including two against the Sox next weekend in Boston.

To the glee of the big crowd, the Yankees poured it on the Red Sox again to mop up the two-game series here. They unloaded 15 hits against a doleful procession of five Boston pitchers to get their own man, Vic Raschi, home with his twenty-first win of the season.

For six innings, Ted Williams was playing a lone hand against the Yankees, in a sudden return to his peak clouting form. His two home runs, in the first and fifth innings, stood alone as the only Boston runs until the seventh.

But the Yankees were hitting all down the line. Willard Nixon, the rookie righthander from Louisville, who started the game for the Red Sox, left a 6-1 deficit when he was taken out. The Yankees kayoed Willard in three rounds, thus beating Dempsey's record.

The frantic Red Sox called next on their relief ace, Ellis Kinder,

'Game of the Day'

Today's "game of the day" in the exciting American League pennant race to be covered by Shirley Povich will be Washington at New York.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Casey Stengel was at ease during the pregame palaver on the Yankee bench today, but not completely content even when reminded that his athletes had a pregame bulge on the Red Sox.

"Yeah, I'm feeling better about the whole thing," Stengel said, "but if you want a quote right out of the mouth of the manager you can say that my idea of a nice lead at this stage of the race is a four-game lead, with three games to play."

Povich

There was a word of encouragement from Yankee Coach Jim Turner when Vic Raschi finished his warm-up and headed for the pitching mound. "Go, get 'em, Vic," yelled Turner.

Turner then confided he had a personal rooting interest in Raschi. "I am always anxious to see him win a ball game," he said. "The guy isn't fit to live with when he blows one."

In the Red Sox dressing room, Ted Williams was explaining all about his troubles at bat. "That day I got four hits in St. Louis, it was a nice warm afternoon and my bad elbow felt good and loose. These cold raw days we have been having, like this one again today, beat me."

WHEREUPON Theodore stepped up to the plate in the first inning and made a complete bum of himself by swatting Raschi's second pitch 40 rows high into the right field bleachers.

Johnny Mize made a pretty little speech expressing his gratitude after being presented with a shiny new Cadillac by a committee of New York fans in home plate ceremonies. Then, in his first time at bat, he whacked a run-scoring two-bagger into right field as a down payment on that gratitude.

When young Willard Nixon couldn't get any of the first three Yankees out in the third inning, Coach Earl Combs walked to the mound for a discussion with the rookie. Initially, the Red Sox acted as if they were going to leave him in. Then Combs looked for another sign from Manager Steve O'Neill. What was flashed was unmistakable. It was nix on Nixon, and Ellis Kinder moved in.

The Yankees didn't regard this as Be Kind to Kinder Week, however, and promptly started slapping him around, too. Little Rizzuto made a mild bit of history by leading off the fourth with a homer into the left field stands. It was the Yanks' 152d homer of the season, more than they've made in 10 years.

BY THE FIFTH inning, it was even colder, more raw than ever—just the kind of a day on which Williams said he couldn't hit well. So he promptly bashed his second homer all the way into the third deck of right field. In a blizzard, he would probably have knocked it over the roof.

At that point, the score stood: Yankees, 6, Williams, 2, and the rest of the Red Sox, 0.

The Yankees were neatly solving the dilemma of Boston fans who were wondering how to cadge World Series tickets in Fenway Park.

As if mortified by their failure to score in the fifth, the first inning in which they were shut out, the Yankees bounced back with two more in the fifth. Johnny Mize dropped a big two-bagger into the inning with that easy swing that makes the fans want to go out there and try it themselves.

The second run of the inning was the gift of Williams who fell into the classic error of trying to throw the ball to the plate before he caught it. Williams ended up with a fumble and 66,924 boos!

BY THE EIGHTH inning, the Red Sox had beckoned a fifth pitcher into the ball game. The roll read: Nixon, Kinder, Masterson, Littlefield and Dobson. The Red Sox's only solace was that they now had tied Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane.

It was getting pretty desperate for the Red Sox in the ninth, but Umpire-in-Chief Cal Hubbard made light of the whole situation. He waved a hand at the alerted electricians and ordered the stadium's lighting system turned on.

With nobody on base, two out in the ninth, the Red Sox trailing, 9-5, and Vern Stephens at bat, the Red Sox were a gone gang unless they could dig up a last-ditch touchdown pass.

Nats Beat A's On Pascual's 5-Hitter, 3-1

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The Nats finished their home season the same way they started it, by beating the Philadelphia Athletics yesterday. The score was 3-1, and the pitching hero was Washington's newest and tiniest Cuban pitcher, Carlos Pascual.

Only 5 feet 5 inches and just turned 19, Pascual pitched a five-hitter at the last-place Mackmen, and would have come out of it with a shutout but for an error by Mickey Vernon in the sixth inning.

The Little Potato, as he was known as in the Big State League where he played for two seasons, reputedly had the best throwing arm in the minors. He did look pretty fast yesterday. The A's were popping up his good fast ball, and he struck out two, walking two.

The A's didn't get more than one hit in any inning.

Pascual's mound opponent was 6-foot, 2-inch John Kucab, also making his major league debut. Kucab, up from Lincoln of the Class A Western League, did himself proud too with a neat seven-hitter. Only trouble was his teammates couldn't get him enough runs.

A top-coated crowd of 2731 turned out to see the Nats complete their farewell game in the quick time of an hour and 34 minutes.

Quick singles by Irv Noren, Ed Stewart and Cass Michaels, and Sam Dente's long fly gave the Nats a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning.

Ferris Fain scored the A's only run in the sixth. He reached first on Vernon's error and came around on a hit batsman, Billy Hitchcock's short single, and Pete Suder's infield out.

A walk to Gil Coan, his second stolen base of the day, and Vernon's two bagger down the right-field line gave the Nats their last run in the eighth.

Skip Alexander Hurt Seriously In Plane Crash

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 24 (AP).—Skip Alexander, Knoxville, Tenn., professional golfer, was injured seriously tonight in a plane crash in a railyard. Police said an ambulance driver reported three military officers were killed in the crash.

Alexander, who had played in the Kansas City Open golf tournament today, was reported in serious condition in Deaconess Hospital.

His injuries included severe burns on the hands, arms and face and a broken leg.

Police identified the dead as an Air Force colonel and two lieutenants.

The crash, in front of the International Harvester Co. plant, tied up traffic on the main line of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad.

Tatum Denies Story That He Quit Oklahoma Under Pressure

Jim Tatum spent much of last night making a wholesale denial of a national magazine article which, he said, besmirched his name at the University of Oklahoma, where he coached before coming to Maryland three years ago.

Specifically, the article, in True Magazine written by Paul Gardner, said:

1. Tatum spent a lot of money on lavish parties while coaching at Oklahoma, and that one $11,000 expenditure was still unaccounted for.

2. That Tatum accused Lloyd Noble, late oil millionaire and regent at the university, of interfering in his program, and that strained relations with him and the Touchdown Club of Oklahoma led to his resigning.

3. That Tatum was told that his Oklahoma team, beaten badly by Oklahoma A. and M., should run up a big score in reprisal in 1946.

Lujack Leads Way; Chicago's Blanda Kicks Three Field Goals

By Russ Newland

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25 (AP).—Chicago's massive Bears, led by John Lujack, passed, pounded and place-kicked to a 32-to-20 National Professional Football League victory over the San Francisco 49ers today, before 35,956.

After trailing 12 to 14 at the half, the Bears came back and scored two touchdowns and a field goal in the third period and another field goal in the fourth quarter.

George Blanda, the field goal specialist, booted the ball between the uprights from distances of 33, 28 and 40 yards.

The 49ers scored their third touchdown late in the final period on a 90-yard advance highlighted by Quarterback Frankie Albert's 26-yard pass to Gordon Soltau, left end, Albert's 34-yard run, and a 15-yard penalty against the Bears.

At the outset, the 49ers recovered a fumble on Chicago's 44. They passed and plunged to the 16, from where Albert threw to End Alex Loyd. Loyd fumbled and Right Guard Bruno Banducci fell on the ball in the end zone.

The Bears came back with Blanda's 33-yard field goal.

The 49ers took the ball on Chicago's 44 late in the first period and scored on a drive with Norm Standlee going over in two tries from the 3.

Just before the first half ended, the Bears, on a series of passes, moved from their own 49 to the 49ers' 4. Halfback Gulyanics made 2 and fumbled on the next line bump, but Kavanaugh fell on the ball in the end zone for the score. Lujack placekicked the point.

Baltimore, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Cleveland Browns showed 15,201 fans their devastating efficiency in the first period and then droned to a 31 to 0 National Football League triumph over the Baltimore Colts today.

Quarterback Otto Graham threatened to pass the Colts right out of Memorial Stadium as he

He quieted down after that and Cleveland's next two touchdowns in each of the final quarters came on long runs of exactly 61 yards each by Dub Jones and Ken Carpenter.

It was the second straight National Football League victory for Cleveland, the only champion the His first two of the game, both caught by Dante Lavelli, created a touchdown. Lavelli was all alone when he caught the second one on the Colt 25 and he scampered the rest of the way.

The same pair kept going the next time Cleveland got the ball after the Colts were repulsed on the Browns' 16. One Graham pass went 43 yards to Lavelli and another 10 yards to the Colt 11. Graham then sent Dub Jones

Giants Sock Braves, 12-4, On Homers

BOSTON, Sept. 24 (AP).—Three-run homers by Hank Thompson and Don Mueller today powered the New York Giants to a 12-4 victory over the Boston Braves. Right Hander Jim Hearn limited the tribesmen to seven hits, including two homers by Tommy Holmes, which accounted for all of the Boston runs, and the 1000th hit of veteran catcher Walker Cooper's major league career.

The Giants, wheile ruining Vernon Bickford's fourth try for his 200th win, lashed four Tribal fingers for 15 hits.

Pirates, Reds Split; Westlake Steals Home

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 24 (AP).—Wally Westlake stole home from third with the winning run in the sixth inning to give the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory in the nightcap of a twin bill with the Cincinnati Reds today.

Cincinnati's Ewell Blackwell almost had a shutout in the first game as the Reds won 7-1. He gave up seven hits and the Bucs' only run came in the ninth. Pitcher Murray Dickson of the Pirates allowed seven hits in the finale. A crowd of 25,233, watched the last home game for the Bucs under lights most of the time.

Pitcher Palica Hits Grand Slam

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24 (AP).—Brooklyn humbled the pennant-minded Philadelphia Phillies, 11-0, today, with Erv Palica throwing a two-hit shutout and hitting a grand slam homerun. The loss cut the Phils' lead to five games over the onrushing Brooks who have copped six straight.

Palica, moved up from the bullpen as a desperation move, had a no-hitter going to the eighth when Andy Seminick led off with a single to right. Del Ennis got the other hit—a double—with two out in the ninth.

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks:

The big stables are beginning to take notice of Apprentice Doyle Gardner who is leading the jockeys here. The New Mexico lad, who says he's been riding horses as long as he can remember, perfomred on quarter horses at the so-called outlaw tracks and piloted winners, too. His first appearance on recognized tracks was on the West Coast. He failed to ride a winner and also didn't get too much encouragement from the horsemen. So he decided to come East. He met and impressed C. A. (Stumpy) Cranford, the Washington trainer. There was some trouble about the youth's contract which delayed action. He finally got started and ran into a long suspension at Timonium. However, he came back strongly. He'll try it on the big time at Bowie starting next Saturday. —Bill.

Browns Take Two, 5-0, 6-1, From Chisox

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24 (AP).—Superb mound performances by Stubby Overmire and Ned Garver gave the St. Louis Browns a double victory over the Chicago White Sox here today. Overmire won the opener, shutting out the Chicagoans on eight hits to gain a 5-0 win, and Garver tossed a neat three-hit, 6-1 victory in the nightcap. Not only did Garver shine defensively but starred at bat as well, driving in two runs on a double and a brace of singles.

Today's double win chopped the White Sox sixth-place lead over the Browns to one game.

Both Ways Hunter Titlist At Chevy Chase

By Harry de Mawby, Jr.

Mrs. J. North Fletcher of Warrenton, Va. won the confirmation hunter championship yesterday with her gray gelding, Both Ways, at the tenth anniversary show of the Washington Bridle Trails Association at the Meadowbrook Grounds, Chevy Chase, Md.

Dr. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay's Phantom Raider garnered the working hunter championship under Mrs. Alex Calvert's handling, nosing out her own entry, Goldwick, by one half point. Phantom Raider scored two blues as the brilliant performer took both the ladies hunters and the hunter hacks. Goldwick was winner of the open event and was third in the ladies class for a 7 point score.

Eagles Intercept 8 Passes by Jim Hardy, Romp Over Cardinals, 45-7

From 3d String to Regular

Barkley of Virginia, Player of the Week

ART GUEPE unexpectedly found himself a new quarterback and The Washington Post its collegiate player of the week in Rufus Barkley of Virginia.

Rufe went into Saturday's George Washington game as third-string quarterback. He came out as the No. 1 man for next Saturday's important game at Penn.

Rufus Barkley

Guepe's move in starting Barkley against G. W. was an act of desperation. Jim Lesane, the regular quarterback, was out with a bruised throwing hand. And Charlie Harding, No. 2 man, and only a sophomore, was jittery about his first varsity game.

So it had to be Rufe, a junior, who played a lot on defense last season. All he did was guide Virginia to all three of the touchdowns in the Cavaliers' 19-0 victory.

He completed 10 out of 13 passes for 148 yards. One of his tosses went 20 yards to End Gene Schroeder, who went the other 29 yards for the third touchdown. Before then, he probed and feinted G. W. into a five-man line, and handed off to Hal Hoak for a 26-yard touchdown run and to Jerry Furst for a 15-yard scoring sprint.

"It was one of the most remarkable exhibitions I have ever seen," said Guepe. "I didn't know he could do all those things. He was a cool character out there, calling the right plays. Now I'll have to start him against Penn, even if Lesane is in good shape again."

Barkley, a 180-pounder from Charleston, W. Va., played his high school football for Episcopal High of Alexandria. He was named to The Washington Post's All-Metropolitan team after quarterbacking Episcopal to an undefeated season in 1947.—HERB HEFT.

Two Fumbles Also Costly To Chicago

CHICAGO, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles converted three intercepted passes and two recovered fumbles into touchdowns today to romp over the bewildered and inept Chicago Cardinals, 45-7, in a National Football League game.

The Cards, making their season start in the Ametrican Conference of the league, misfired so badly at times that they drew boos from the Comiskey Park crowd of 24,914.

Card Quarterback Jim Hardy was the goat of the game. In 39 passes he completed only 12 and hal 8 filched, one shy of a league record. Russ Craft intercepted four of them and Joe Sutton three. Five of the Eagles' six touchdowns were touched off by stolen Hardy passes of Hardy fumbles.

The Eagles, who lost their opener a week ago, 35-10, to the Cleveland Browns, scored 10 points in the first quarter and blew the game wide open with 21 in the second for a 31-0 halftime lead. They tallied twice in the third. The finale was scoreless.

A recovered fumble also set up an eventual 27-yard field goal by Cliff Patton who booted six extra points too.

Frank Tripucka, Hardy's understudy, was inserted midway in the last period. He was in for only three plays before being helped off the field with an ankle injury. The Eagles' great runner, Steve Van Buren, was sidelined in the opening quarter with a torn rib cartilage.

The cards only spurt of the contest was in the third when Hardy passed 51 yards to Mal Kutner and then 34 more for a touchdown to Rookie Francis Polsfoot of Washington State.

Teigland, Myers Win Sailing Races

A fresh northwest wind swept over the 1950 President's Cup Regatta sail fleet racing off Hains Point yesterday and scrambled final positions in half a dozen classes.

But out of the melee, two skippers emerged as standout sailors for the two days of keen competition winding up the month-long show.

Billy Myers of Oxford, Md., took all three races in the Star Class with his red-hulled White Shadow and earned the United States Steel Trophy for the third straight year.

John Teigland, jr., of Medford, N. J., made a clean sweep of the Lightning Class.

In the hotly contested Thistle Class, Gordon (Sandy) Douglass of Painsville, Ohio, tied for top honors with Dr. Walter Lawson of Washington. Douglass got the top prize, however, by coming in ahead of Lawson two out of three races. Frank Marquardt of Alexandria, current class champion, was third, only a third of a point back of the two leaders.

Penguin honors were tied, too. Bob Clagett of Washington and Joe Krafft of Alexandria had 721/3 points apiece, but Clagett won the first prize by coming in ahead of Krafft more times.

Sailing Chairman Bill Heintz presided at trophy presentation at the Washington Sailing Marina.

Miss Pepsi, Winner Of President's Cup, Sinks After Mishap

NEW MARIINSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—The $100,000 record-breaking racing boat "Miss Pepsi," winner of the President's Cup in Washington last week, was sunk in the Ohio River today during the New Martinsville Regatta.

The boat turned end-over-end while rounding a pylon at a speed of about 60 miles an hour, and tossed Driver Chuck Thompson and Harold Beadsley, both of Detroit, into the water. They were taken to a New Martinsville hospital for treatment of shock, leg lacerations and bruises.

Ray Dossin of Detroit, one of the owners of the boat, said the craft either hit driftwood or nosed down in turning the pylon, causing it to upset. He said the amount of damage to the craft cannot be determined until it is raised tomorrow.

After Licking at Georgia

Navy Will Test Terps' Ability to Come Back

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The full extent of that 27-7 face-slapping Maryland received at the hands of Georgia in their opener won't be determined until next Saturday. That's when the Terps dedicate their new stadium against untested Navy.

If the Terps can bounce back and whip the Middies, they'll prove the wound Georgia inflicted isn't malignant. On the other hand, if Navy wins, Maryland's season, which will be only two games old, will be a complete wreck.

Beginning today, as they start work for the Navy game, Coach Jim Tatum and his players face a fight for their football lives. Their hopes for an unbeaten season, and there were many who believed Maryland would take it all this year, were extinguished in the boiling pot that was Athens Saturday.

Tatum must guard against a letdown such as he, his assistants and the players had after North Carolina shellacked Maryland, 49-20, in 1948. The Terps would have done better to stay at home after that game. It was their season. No team ever wanted to win a game more than Maryland did that day against Charlie Justice, Hosea Rodgers, Art Weiner & Co. When they failed, they folded. Vanderbilt walked over them, 34-0. And West Virginia completed the humiliation, 16-14.

There's little likelihood of a repetition of that this year. Maryland has too much at stake and too many good football players to collapse.

The score doesn't indicate it, but that was no slouch of a team Georgia and the weather licked Saturday. For the first time in four years, Maryland has a quarterback, which means that Maryland at last has an offense to go with its good defense.

Jck Scarbath, the 19-year-old sophomore from Baltimore, appears to be the answer to Tatum's hunt and prayers for a T-formation quarterback. Scarbath can pass, run, his play-calling is good and what's more, he's daring. But he knows when to gamble.

"He was ten times better than I thought," Tatum said, and Mighty Mo Modzelewski, who was running with practically no help in the second half, proved that he's as good as he's cracked up to be. He played almost the whole game in the stifling 85-degree weather and averaged more than five yards a carry. "He's the best looking halfback I've seen in years," said Coach Wally Butts, of Georgia.

"I doubt very much if we would have scored against them if they hadn't fumbled so much. (Editor's note: Georgia recovered five of Maryland's fumbles and converted three of them into scores in the second half).

Tatum yesterday was naturally downcast, but he wasn't disconsolate.

"I was never so satisfied with a defeat," he said. "We've got a good football team and we played well for not having had more opportunity to practice. Maryland will win a lot of football games this year."

Tatum Denies 'Pressure' Story

didn't get in my way once I became coach.

"There was no Touchdown Club at the time I left Oklahoma, so I couldn't have had strained relations with it. And I didn't leave Oklahoma under pressure.

"I had an Oklahoma offer of a seven-year contract at $12,000, but turned it down. Oklahoma U. President George L. Cross will back me up on that.

"Third, I never said I was told to run up a big score on the Aggies, although a lot of folks were glad to see us do it.

"This whole article steers my quotes in the wrong direction.

"This whole article is detrimental to me. I am not quite sure yet what I'm going to do about it," said Tatum.

The article said that "700 oil millionaires" support the football program at Oklahoma.

"The millionaires never touch a football, but they scored all the touchdowns that made Oklahoma the leading offensive team in the country last year," the article continued.

Dr. Cross branded the story as false, and he sent a letter to Tatum which said in part:

"The statement that Noble interfered with your football program by trying to be too helpful is quite fictitious. Mr. Noble opposed your appointment as coach and told you so frankly, then for the most part ignored you.

"Your chief problem, as you explained to me in my office on several occasions, was how to gain his friendship and get him interested in what you were trying to do. I am reminding you of these facts because Mr. Noble is now deceased and cannot speak for himself.

"One other thing—if you told the True writer that the regents of the university and the president of the university ordered you or urged you to run up a large score on the Oklahoma A&M football team in 1946, you did not tell the truth.

"Neither the regents nor I gave you any such instructions at any time. Nor did I, talk to the football team on the day of that game, or on the day of any other game.

"I hope that you did not make the remarks attributed to you in the article. They are not worthy of a coach of your stature."

Tatum said last night that he telephoned Dr. Cross as soon as he received the letter, and that they had gotten things "straightened out."

"I wasn't quoted correctly," said Tatum, "and I'm going to get in touch with Gardner, and straighten things out with him too."

Larsen, Pat Todd Win Tennis Titles

Berkeley, Calif., Sept. 24 (AP).—Southpaw Art Larsen of San Lenadro, Calif., national amateur champion, won the national hard court tennis championship today, 4—6, 6—3, 6—3, 6—2 over Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills. The women's crown was captured by top-seeded Pat Canning Todd of La Jolla, Calif., who disposed of Magda Rurae of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—3.

around right and for the score on the first running play called by the Cleveland field general.

The former Northwestern quarterback completed three more straight passes good for 54 yards to the Colt 32. Marion Motley advanced the ball to the 14 after which two of his passes finally missed. Graham called on Forrest Grigg to kick a field goal from the 19.

After a listless second period enlivened only by the Colts' failure to score after reaching the 3-yard line, Jones gave the crowd a thrill in the third.

Starting around his own left end from his own 39, Jones breezed down the sidelines in a neat sidestepping touchdown run. Carpenter pulled a carbon copy of the run in the fourth period except for cutting back to midfield for the final yards.

Graham would up with 11 completions out of 23 attempts.

Lions Win On Walker's Field Goal

DETROIT, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Detroit Lions fought their way from behind in the final period to edge the Pittsburgh Steelers, 10-7, in a National Football League game today with Doak Walker kicking the winning field goal in the last three minutes of play.

The former Southern Methodist star climaxed a brilliant day's performance by kicking home the game-winning 20-yard field goal after he had got Detroit back in the ball game by contributing a fourth period touchdown.

A crowd of 18,707 saw the Pittsburgh club grab a 7-0 third period lead on an 82-yard, 5-play march with Bobby Gage tossing a 43-yard touchdown pass to Elbie Nickel.

The Steelers absorbed their second straight NFL setback, however, as the Lions came to life in the final period to remain undefeated in two NFL clashes to date.

The Detroit offense clicked for a touchdown just eight minutes after the Steelers had dented the Lion's goal line.

Bobby Layne and Walker sparked an 80-yard scoring drive with Layne tossing an 11-yard payoff pass to Walker who stole the ball from the arms of Pittsburgh's Lynn Chandnois on the 4-yard line and skipped into the end zone.

Chandnois, a former Michigan State College star, had jumped into the air in an attempt to defend against the pass and seemed to have it in his possession when Walker snatched it away and stepped over for the touchdown. He then place-kicked the tying point.

Detroit got its big break in the last five minutes of play when Pittsburgh's Gage fumbled a punt on his 21 with the Lions recovering the free ball on Pittsburgh's 15.

Three running plays went nowhere but Walker dropped back and booted in the winning points with a perfect field goal.

Gen. Parks' 81 Wins Brass Hat Trophy

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Floyd Parks, Chief of Information, U. S. Army, won the Brass Hat Trophy at East Potomac golf course yesterday.

Parks had a 43-38—81, nine over par, in the Federal Golf Association's celebrities tourney.

Vice Admiral E. D. Foster won the low net cup, carding an 87-14—73. Capt. Kenneth Craig, USN, aid to Gen. George C. Marshall, Secretary of Defense, took second low gross with an 86. Clifton Mack, Federal Supply Administrator, took second low net with 110-36—74.

In non-celebrity play, the "Best Shot of the Day" statuette was won by Bill Spellman, who chipped in from 30 feet off the green on the third. The shot gave Bill a par five for the hole.

COLUMBIA: Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kerkam won low gross in the mixed Scotch foursome with 191. Mr. and Mrs. Carl McCartee took second low gross with 192. Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hickey tied R. C. Miller and Mrs. William Werber for first low net. Both had 183s.

ARGYLE: Betty Garber beat Mrs. Ruth Mothershead, 2 and 1, and Mrs. Helen Sasscer defeated Mrs. Carolyn Foley, 3 and 2, in semi-final matches of the women's club championship tourney. Results in second round play of the men's club championship tournament:

Roger Martino beat W. T. August, 4 and 2. Rud Clark beat C. L. Turner, one up in 19 holes. A. G. Prada beat R. S. Beale, 3 and 1. Doug Berry beat Tom Shenk, 6 and 5. Frank Miller beat Clyde McFarland, 2 and 1. Dick Mothershead beat W. J. Lawson, one up in 19 holes. H. B. Miller beat J. W. Reynolds, 5 and 4.

FORT DUPONT: Louise Sayers leads qualifiers in the women's club championship tournament with a 52. Rachel Yap's 55 is second. Catherine Nealis and Joan Craig had 56s, and Jeanne Read had a 58. Qualifying continues until Friday.

BELLE HAVEN: Joe Daniels and Eddie Frank won the men's match play against par, 5 up. Ed Talbot and Jim Swink were second, one up. Fred Tropp, 82-13—69, won the sweepstakes tournament.

Joe Daniels ousted Defending Champion Frank Heyer in the club championship tournament, winning one up in their quarter-final round. Daniels was two down at the turn, but came back to win ten with a par, eleven with a birdie, and seventeen with a birdie deuce without losing a hole.

ANACOSTIA: Danny Burton beat George Parker, 4 and 3, Bill Davis beat Hugo Kanscar, 3 and 2, and Fred Lukat beat Harry Hanbury, 6 and 5, in matches played in the Garfield Gamble Trophy tournament.

Paul S. Rundall, 1708 Abingdon rd., Alexandria, made a hole-in-one on the 217-yard 18th hole. Paul made his successful tee shot with a two wood. He was playing with Ralph Ocheske and George Park.

KENWOOD: Don Miller won the club championship, defeating Larry Imhoff, 4 and 3, in a 36-hole match. Both had medal scores of 72 for the first 18 holes, but Miller was one up.

J. C. Larson won the first-flight championship, beating Bill Bigg, one up. F. B. Murphy, J. A. Barbeau, F. J. O'Hara and I. F. Conrad won the blind bogey with net 81s.

BETHESDA: Defending Champion Tony Popalaski lost to Bill Shaw, one up in 19 holes, in the first round of the men's club championship tournament yesterday. Shaw had a birdie three on the 19th to win.

Both co-medalists won their first round matches. Earl Skinker beat Reece Burney, 5 and 4, and George Winkler defeated Fran Donaldson, 2 and 1.

INDIAN SPRING: Dr. Bill Wolf and Phil Berman upset Eddie Ault and Art Zinnaman, 2 and 1, in first-round play in the two-man-team tournament. Sam Dinerman and Dave Rosenberg won the most impressive victory of the day with a big 6-and-5 win over Bob Ickes and Charley Fishman.

CONGRESSIONAL: Bill Shea won the club championship for the second straight year, winning, 7 and 6, over Fleming Bomar in the 36-hole finale. Shea was out in 74, nine strokes better than Bomar, and was eight up at the turn. Bomar rallied to gain a hole on 22, but could not close the gap.

WOODMONT: Cabot Feldman was medalist in qualifying round play for the club championship tournament with 82. Dave Wortman was second low with 85, Len Jacobs had 86, and Chips Cantor had 88.

PRINCE GEORGES: Bob Bowie upset Kenwood Invitational Champion Mike Jankowski, 2 and 1, in quarter-final play in the club championship tournament.

MANOR: R. T. Gibson won the playoff for the Senior Championship, defeating W. I. Hicks in an 18-hole medal play round. Gibson had a 75. Hicks had 80. Chester Leakin won the blind bogey with 91—13—78. Ray Fleming with a net 81 was second.

ARMY NAVY: Col. T. W. Parker and Col. Paul Schultz tied for low gross in the 18-hole sweepstakes with 76s. Comdr. C. W. Bundy won low net with 88—20—68. Maj. W. J. Casey was second with a net 69. Results of play in the club championship tournament:

Maj. B. K. Yount beat Col. A. J. Evans, 2 and 1. Col. W. C. James beat Maj. S. G. Salisbury, 3 and 2. A. C. Puryear beat Col. R. M. Crow, 3 and 1. Col. W. D. Reed defeated Admiral J. S. Phillips, 4 and 3. Maj. G. H. Foster beat Col. W. Vail, one up. Col. Burt White defeated Cmdr. R. C. Childers, 2 up. Capt. H. Haynesworth won by default.

perate mood. On their own 30, with fourth down and two to go, Baugh faked a kick and passed to end Ed Berrang, who went 16 yards.

The successful gamble went for nothing when Chuck Dravenovich fumbled on the next play. End Abner Wimberly recovered on the Redskin 49 and Green Bay was headed goalward again.

Larry Coutre, Notre Dame's famed breakaway runner, exhibited plenty of college try in successive runs of 15 and 10 yards. Then Canadeo broke over his right guard to go all the way. The run was nullified by a back in motion and Green Bay had to do it again.

With the help of a 15-yard penalty against the Redskins, the Packers did, Coutre plunging from the one.

Ted Fritsch, who missed four field goal attempts all from outside the 35-yard line, did much better in close, making all five conversions.

Late in the game, Gilmer sparked two sustained offensives but both ended the same way. The gritty 153-pounder twice hit Green Bay's Al Baldwin in the end zone to lose possession.

It wasn't only Washington's feelings that were hurt. In the course of as rough and tough a game as ever has been waged at State Fair Park, Ed Quirk, Joe Tereshinski, Hall Haynes, Pete Stout and, finally Badaczewski were helped off the field.

George Preston Marshall wasn't feeling too good about having to open in Griffith Stadium next Sunday against the Steelers with his unbeaten record smashed.

Marshall collared the officials right after the game ended and vigorously waved his finger under their noses at midfield. It wasn't in full view of the crowd. By then most of the happy Green Bay supporters were filing out of the stadium.

immediately realizing his error, reversed himself and called Lemon safe.

In the Tiger clubhouse later, Manager Red Rolfe refused to discuss the play.

"What happened to Robinson?" everybody wanted to know.

"I absolutely have no comment to make on that," Rolfe declared flatly.

Robinson wouldn't talk. However, George Kell, Robby's teammate, tried to explain the catcher's peculiar action.

"Robinson told me he thought Kolloway hadn't touched first base," Kell said. "He thought it was a routine force out at home. It's just one of those mistakes that could happen to any one."

From the press box it was easily discernible that Kolloway had stepped on first base. He gloved the ball just inside the bag and simply took one step to touch the sack. Then he wheeled and made a perfect throw to the plate.

Of all the writers, players and coaches approached, none thought that Lemon would have beaten the tag.

Jim Dawson of the New York Times, one of the seven visiting writers covering the game, quoted Rolfe as saying:

"Robinson was to blame. Nobody else. Kolloway made the correct play. Lemon would have been out by at least 5 feet."

Robinson's blunder rubbed some of the gloss off Lemon's all-around performance. The 30-year-old righthander was the whole show for the Indians. He not only baffled the Bengals with five hits but scored both Cleveland runs.

Lemon homered in the fourth for the Indians' first tally.

His lead-off triple in the bottom of the tenth paved the way for the winning run. It also started some sharp master minding by Manager Red Rolfe.

The Tiger skipper ordered pitcher Ted Gray to intentionally pass the next two batters. That loaded the bases, making a force play possible at the plate. The strategy seemed perfect, as Gray got Larry Doby to foul out to Kolloway and made Easter hit on the ground to the same player. Then came the lapse and the ball game.

It was Cleveland's third straight triumph over the fast-fading Tigers, who now trail the league-leading Yankees by 2½ games. Detroit has seven left to play, to New York's eight.

From start to finish the game was played under the lights. The umpires ordered the huge floodlights turned on a half hour before game time when black overhanging clouds caused almost complete darkness. It was later explained that forest fires in Canada had caused smoke layers rising as high as 16,000 to 20,000 feet. It was the first time an afternoon game was played in its entirety under the lights.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Budget Bill Carries Funds for Moving Agencies From D. C.

Funds that could be used for the transfer of Federal agencies and employes out of this city are carried in the supplemental budget bill now before the President.

Under "emergency operating expenses," a total of 15 million dollars is earmarked for General Services to lease buildings, to move Federal agencies and to pay expenses to employes who are moved.

Federal officials are reported to have their eye on two major agencies here—agencies they believe could be operated outside of this city as well as they are here. But locating office space and housing to which the agencies and employes could be moved is a major problem.

Construction of the new General Accounting Office here may be speeded up and turned over to defense agencies as well as any other space opened up here.

STASSEN JOB? Has the United Nations sounded out Harold E. Stassen to set up a trusteeship for Korea when the U. N. forces whip the Communists there? That could be the answer to the speculation over the future of the GOP presidential candidate in 1948 who is now president of the University of Pennsylvania.

Remember this—Stassen drew up the trustee provision at the 1945 U. N. charter conference in San Francisco. Also, he hints of an impending assignment of importance.

VA: It will set up an office in Philadelphia to handle the big increase from armed forces members for its National Service Life Insurance. Employes in its insurance underwriting office here will be given the opportunity to transfer to the new unit.

BILL: These are among other provisions in the 17-billion-dollar budget bill:

NBS: The National Bureau of Standards is directed to relocate its guided missile laboratory in a Navy building at Corona, Calif. Furthermore, the Navy is told to declare the building surplus and to turn it over to the bureau.

POST OFFICE: The Postmaster General is directed to petition the Interstate Commerce Commission for a boost in fourth-class mail rates. The rider provides that Postoffice can't draw funds from the Treasury to help its deficit unless it seeks to increase fourth-class rates.

COAST GUARD: Another rider gives it the authority to spend money available to it at a faster rate if and when the President and the Treasury Secretary determine it to be in the interest of national defense.

DEFENSE: In an unusual action, the Congress directs the Army to promote Col. Robert Moore to the rank of brigadier general. Moore is a special assistant to the Defense comptroller. In addition, the rider would bring about a promotion to admiral for the Navy officer who is deputy comptroller of the Navy.

WARNING: Representative Rees of Kansas, the ranking Republican on the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, has called on Federal agencies to "tighten their own belts." He said in part:

"Government agencies had better get away from thinking in terms of additional employes every time they get an appropriation. A much better and healthier thing to do is to reverse this situation and demand that all out effort be made to save everywhere in manpower and money.

"Allocate employment on the basis of need for prosecution of the war effort. Eliminate all activities not essential for defense. Create a spirit that everyone owes his best in Government employment. If the Government will really tighten its belt, there will be no need for an additional 200,000 employes in Government agencies as proposed by the Administration."

Rees is underestimating the Administration's estimates of new employes by plenty. The unofficial figure is now 500,000, and new employes are now being hired at a rate equalled only during the height of World War II.

Mothers Hold Similar But Separate Ceremonies

Gold Star Groups, Now in Court Fight, Lay Wreaths On Arlington Tomb

Two groups of Gold Star Mothers, who are battling in court, yesterday held two almost identical ceremonies honoring the war dead at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery.

The National Gold Star Mothers Inc., incorporated last March, was the first to lay wreaths in a ceremony at 10:15 a. m. After the ceremony, they immediately took away the wreaths, placing them on the graves of the late Secretary of Defense Forrestal and of the sons of several of the members.

At 1 p. m., the American Gold Star Mothers, Inc., which filed suit Saturday in District Court to enjoin the other group from using a name so similar to its own, held a ceremony in the Amphitheater and at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The American group was organized in 1929.

Neither group referred to the other yesterday, a day set aside by act of Congress as Gold Star Mothers Day, and despite their differences, the leaders of both groups asked for the same thing: that the mothers work for peace and freedom of the world so that their sons may not have died in vain.

Both ceremonies opened with the massing of colors. For both groups Col. W. B. Estes, United States Army chaplain, gave the invocation, Capt. Louis Barish, United States Army chaplain, a prayer for peace, and Captain Arthur M. Finnegan, United States Army chaplain, the benediction.

Each group laid a wreath of yellow flowers in the form of a star on the Tomb. Wreaths were also placed there by other groups, including the Gold Star Wives of America, represented at both ceremonies.

The National group heard music by the United States Army Band, the American group by the United States Navy Band.

In their court suit, the American group charged that the other group chose its name to "deceive, confuse and mislead the public."

A spokesman for the National group said, however, she could see no reason for confusion. She pointed out there was the American Broadcasting Co. and the National Broadcasting Co., the American Baseball League and the National Baseball League, and the American Biscuit Co. and the National Biscuit Co., none of which seemed to have trouble because of the similarity of their names.

Sunset Today

Jews to Begin Observance Of Sukkos

High Holy Day celebrations for Jews the world over will end with observance of Sukkos, the Feast of Tabernacles, which begins at sunset today.

Orthodox and conservative Jews will observe the Harvest Festival for nine days, with the first two and last two as full holidays. Reform Jews will observe eight days, with the first and eighth as full holidays.

In local synagogues and temples, this happiest and longest of Jewish religious holidays will be celebrated. It is roughly similar to the Puritan version of Thanksgiving.

"Sukkos" is the Hebrew word for "booth," a temporary abode where people were accustomed to dwell during the harvest season in the agricultural state of ancient Israel. To this day devout Jews build such temporary structures out-of-doors where possible, near their homes or place of worship.

New Church Dedicated at Michigan Park

More than 300 persons attended the dedication of the new $60,000 Michigan Park Christian Church yesterday afternoon at 1600 Taylor st. ne.

In the dedicatory sermon, the Rev. Jesse M. Bader, executive secretary of the department of evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches, stressed the importance of "a place in which man may find peace and security in a world of turmoil."

The Rev. William J. Lineback, general secretary of the Capital Area Christian Missionary Society, participated in special morning services observing the event.

The church, formerly known as Third Church, had its beginnings in 1895. It formerly was located at 6th and H sts. sw.

The building was sold in 1944 and the congregation met until recently in the King David Masonic Temple, 12th and Monroe sts. ne. The Rev. Arthur A. Azlein is pastor.

Roanoke Man Will Direct Holy Name

300 Attend Richmond Diocese Convention in Alexandria Armory

Thomas D. Keeney, of Roanoke, was elected president of the Richmond Diocesan Union of the Holy Name Society at the group's annual convention held yesterday in Alexandria.

Keeney moved up from the vice presidency, and succeeds Clarence E. Dyson, of 905 So. St. Asaph st., Alexandria.

More than 300 delegates from 52 of the 82 parishes in the diocese attended the day-long meeting held in the Alexandria city armory, 210 S. Royal st.

Other officers elected were E. J. Marrin of Richmond, vice president; John J. Brown of Norfolk, financial secretary; Leo P. Moore of Richmond, recording secretary, and Joseph A. Sarandria of Winchester, treasurer.

Four marshals were also elected. They were H. E. Clougherty of Harrisonburg, Robert Schwarz of Alexandria, John Reisback of Newport News and David J. Smith of Portsmouth.

In the chief address, Judge Edward M. Curran of the District Court [illegible] we must "ferret out and des[illegible] those who spread class hatred, prejudice, set social class against social class and one religion against another."

The Most Rev. Peter L. Iredon, bishop of Richmond, in another convention address, warned against man "slipping away" from God.

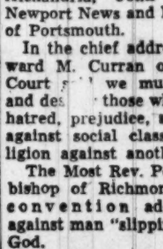
Bishop Iredon said "the impulse of so many Americans toward the spirit is well known . . . and indicates a dissatisfaction in the minds of thousands with their previous outlook, and a defeatism because they can't see their way through."

Other speakers included the Rev. T. E. O'Connell, diocesan spiritual director; the Right Rev. Msgr. Edward L. Stephens, pastor of Mt. St. Mary's Catholic Church, the Very Rev. Harry Graham, national spiritual director; Philip F. Ogilvie, executive secretary of the Catholic Committee for the South and John Daly, editor of the Catholic Virginian.

Bladensburg Fracas Ends In Shooting

Trouble met Malcolm D. Collison at 5600 Annapolis rd., Bladensburg, Md., again yesterday.

This time he was wounded in the thigh by a charge from a 12-gauge shotgun when, Prince Georges County police said, he kicked open the door of Mrs. Thelma Hackenberg's home in an attempt to see her.



Collison

Collison was admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital in fair condition. He was charged with breaking and entering.

Harry L. Norris, 74, the woman's father, was arrested on a "technical" charge of assault with a deadly weapon and released on $200 bond for appearance when called at the Hyattsville Police Court.

Last June Collison, 37, of Mayo, Md., then living in the house, was charged with arson and assault with intent to kill when he was accused of hitting Mrs. Hackenberg with a jack handle and setting fire to her house. He is awaiting trial on these charges.

Well, 'Dig' This: 133 Zealous 'Fossils' Help D. C.'s Retired Workers to Banish Boredom

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

It seems there are 133 fossils in the Greater Washington area.

This is a human, not a geological phenomenon.

"The Fossils" are a group of retired men who doubt that a man's usefulness to himself or to society stops when his career ends.

And so, more than 2 years ago, they organized themselves into an informal, dues-less, nondenominational activities club. It operates at a pace which leaves younger, lesser men panting.

Only membership qualification: you must be retired.

Only rule: no women. Said one balding member, happily: "That's the best thing about this group."

Aims: to help retired men to pick up new interests, promote sociability, broaden the knowledge of men whose younger years were linked to a specialized career and to keep in touch with public needs and problems.

"Fossils" may be found all over this area. In the District proper there are 48; in Maryland, 46, and in Virginia, 38. One Fossil even migrated back to his native England.

"Fossils" have retired from about any profession you can name—55 in all.

There are former doctors, lawyers, merchants. There are retired Army officers, ministers, geologists, architects, accountants, draftsmen, engineers, advertising men, printers, and sanitary engineers.

For example, Fossil Marshall L. Fearnow is a retired jeweler; Lorin H. Bailey a former chemist; Fred Leonard was the postmaster of Chevy Chase; Dr. Maris M. Proffitt a former Maryland University professor; Victor L. Lowe a retired Bureau of Standards official, and Ralph Albertson a former minister and social worker.

"Youngster" of the group is Fossil Edwin Schneider, a retired builder of 63 summers. Dean of the Fossils is Samuel A. Baer, 90, who will be given a testimonial dinner by the group soon.

Fossil President Dr. Harvey L. Curtis is a retired physicist. The only other officer, Robert H. Rice—the secretary-treasurer is former auditor at Mount Vernon Junior College.

"Fossils" have a general membership meeting each month, but all-out activity takes place almost any time.

They may meet at a member's home to review and chat about a book—say, "Shakespeare of London" by Marchette Chute, or "The American Democracy," by Harold Lasky.

This Thursday, they'll tour the Washington Zoo under the amiable guidance of Director William Mann, and the next night they meet at the Washington home of Robert O. Saunders (retired manager of the Remington Rand office here) for an evening of Schubert, Straus, Elgar, Von Suppe, and Mozart on records.

Last week, for example, 25 members raised umbrellas to a soaking September rain and met at the Chevy Chase Methodist Church to discuss recognition of Communist China by the United Nations.

The meeting was conducted with all the gravity of a session of Parliament. Debate was mannerly and informed.

A majority of speakers seemed to oppose the topic. One Fossil dozed quietly in his seat, but the rest followed the argument intently. If one member occasionally interrupted another, the total effect was of tolerance and good humor.

As an organization, the Fossils mean many things to many members.

Fossil Eugene Merritt, a retired Agriculture Department economist, puts it this way: "When some men come in, they kind of get in their shells and somebody has to dig them out.

"They've left their jobs and maybe lost their wives. There children are grown up and living out of town. They're lost. And this gives them a pretty good outlet."

So impressed were two University of Chicago sociologists with The Fossils that they wrote, in the January-February issue of "Sociology and Social Research:"

"One particular group stood out as strikingly well-adjusted, both as to general conditions of old age and to the special factors of retirement from employment. This is an organization of retired men known as The Fossils, who live in Washington, D. C. and vicinity."

For some members, The Fossils means a push towards new activities. Andrew W. Starratt, former accountant, became treasurer of his church. A retired economist, William B. Horne, now does carpentry repairs at his church.

As the Fossils see it, members have a lifetime of service behind them—and years of useful living ahead.

Papal Delegate Leads Rites At Monastery

In ceremonies presided over by the Most Rev. Amlete Giovanani Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, the Visitation Monastery at Bethesda celebrated its 100th anniversary yesterday.

A solemn pontifical mass of thanksgiving was offered by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, on the Feast Day of Our Lady of Mercy, one century after six sisters of the Order of Nuns of the Visitation founded the monastery.

The Rev. James Hayes, formerly of Catholic University, preached the sermon, in which he traced the growth of the order and the community in which it thrived.

A crozier which once belonged to the late Archbishop Neale, founder of the Visitation Order in the United States, was used by Archbishop O'Boyle in the mass. The crozier, a shepherd's crook of religious significance, was used when the order was founded.

The Sisters of the Visitation once conducted an academy at 10th and F sts. nw., later moving to a site opposite St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw. In 1877, they built an academy at Connecticut ave and L st. nw., and in 1923 constructed the present monastery in Bethesda at 9001 Georgetown rd.

In another centennial observance, a three-day celebration will begin Wednesday commemorating the 100th anniversary of the affiliation of the Sisters of Charity of St. Joseph with the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

Solemn pontifical mass will open the program each day of the Triduum to be held at St. Joseph Central House in Emmitsburg, Md.

Archbishop O'Boyle will pontificate the first day, with the Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, and Archbishop Cicognani, saying mass on the succeeding days.

Priests of St. Sulpice will assist in first-day ceremonies, and the choir of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, will sing the mass. The Very Rev. Lloyd P. McDonald, S.S., provincial superior, will preach.

Second-day proceedings will be under the auspices of the priests of Mount St. Mary's, Emmitsburg.

On the final day, the priests of the Congregation of the Mission will assist in the ceremonies.

Dr. Tuve Honored for Proximity Fuse Work

Dr. Merle A. Tuve, Director of the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism at Carnegie Institution here, yesterday was named winner of the Franklin Institute Howard A. Potts medal for 1950. It will be presented in Philadelphia October 18.

The reason for the honor was Dr. Tuve's leadership in developing the first workable proximity fuse. The fuse played a major part in winning World War II.

Last night, Dr. Tuve, who lives at 135 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, Md., said the announcement made him a "little embarrassed."

He explained that the fuse project was not really "my field. It was wished on a group of us. The Navy said it was impossible when we started on it in 1940, but it was in battle in 1943."

Main Field in Geophysics

Dr. Tuve's main field is geophysics. Since 1925—except for his wartime work—the 49-year-old research physicist has been studying the crust of the earth.

As a scientist, he has the attitude—as expressed when he received the $2500 Research Corporation award for his fuse work—that the outstanding need for the world is not for scientists, but rather for "gifted and creative thinkers working in the broad field of human relationships."

MERLE A. TUVE
. . . receives medal

"And not just politics or economics, but the relation of man to other men and the true nature of his relation to himself."

Dr. Tuve urged university officials "to seek out the great humanists on their faculties and give them positions of prestige, influence, resources and support even more conspicuous and generous than those of their most brilliant scientific specialists."

Won Philadelphia Award

Besides winning the Franklin Institute medal and the Research Corporation award, Dr. Tuve was presented the John Scott award of the City of Philadelphia in December, 1948, and in 1946 was given the Presidential Medal of Merit.

Before the war, Dr. Tuve was director of the Johns Hopkins laboratory, Silver Spring. In 1946 he resigned and returned to his post at Carnegie Institution, where he was then chief physicist.

His 17-year-old son, Trygve, also is an award winner. In 1947, as a Leland Junior High student, he won a weekly contest on picking football winners sponsored by The Washington Post.

Two Women Die in D. C. Area Traffic Accidents

Two Alexandrians Critically Burned When Car Hits Bridge in Virginia

Two District women were killed and two men from Alexandria were critically injured in area traffic accidents yesterday.

Mrs. Jenny Wright, 66, of 1034 Whittingham pl. se., died in Gallinger Hospital from injuries suffered in an accident a half mile east of Front Royal, Va., on State Route 55 yesterday at 3:45 p. m.

Driver of the auto, which apparently went out of control on a hill, probably due to brake failure, was Mrs. Wright's nephew, Walter Lee, of the Whittingham pl. address. Also in the car was Mrs. Clara Wilcher, 4619 Addison rd., Kenilworth, Md., Mrs. Wright's niece.

Mrs. Wilcher told police they were on a pleasure trip to Skyline Drive, Va.

Listed by Maryland State police as the fourth fatality in as many days in the vicinity of Waldorf was Mrs. Eloise Proctor, 31, of 1254 S. Capitol st.

Police said she was a passenger in an auto driven by Adolphus K. Henry, 32, of 1018 S. Capitol st., which ran off the road, struck a guide post and overturned about 4 a. m. on Route 5 near Birch Swamp Hill, TB.

Two other pasengers were treated at Providence Hospital for minor injuries and released. They were Mrs. Myrtle Nelson, 24, of 55 Q st. sw., and Ola Brown, 26, of 401 8th st. sw.

Two Badly Burned

In critical condition at Alexandria Hospital with third degree burns over their entire bodies were Willie E. Burns, 31, of 412 N. Henry st., Alexandria, and Edward Lee, 35, of 1201 Madison st., Alexandria.

Fairfax police said Burns was driving a car with Lee as a passenger on Route 236, at Turkey Cock Run, about three miles east of Annandale, when the car hit the side of a bridge, knocked it down, swerved around, struck the other side of the bridge and burst into flames.

The two men were dragged from the flaming car by members of the Annandale Fire Department. The car was completely destroyed. Police estimated Burns was traveling about 80 miles an hour when the accident happened, shortly after 3 p. m.

Three Escape Injury

In another accident, about 12:20 a. m., on the Mount Vernon blvd. at Bashford lane, Alexandria, one person was injured and three others escaped injury in a three-car collision.

Police said a car going south on the boulevard and driven by George P. Wagner, jr., 20, of 2608 South 27th rd., Arlington, went through a red light, striking a car traveling on Bashford lane and driven by John R. Dunn, 17, of 11 West Herbert st., Alexandria.

Wagner's car overturned five times, then skidded approximately 198 feet on its top, striking a third car, driven north on the boulevard by George F. Nash, 31, of 1400 South Barton st., Arlington, police said.

Charles Pavone, 29, of 917 Oronoco st., Alexandria, a passenger in Nash's car, was treated at Alexandria Hospital for slight injuries to his left arm and knee.

Mrs. Johnson Faces Quiz in Shooting of Common-Law Mate

Mrs. Lillian Johnson, 36, of 1120 11th st. nw., will appear at a coroner's inquest today at 11:30 a.m. in the fatal shooting of her common-law husband, Jessie Johnson, 46.

Johnson was killed about 8:40 p.m. Saturday during an argument in the bedroom of their home. Two bullets had entered the back of his neck and three bullets had pierced his chest.

Mrs. Johnston told police her husband struck her when he came home Saturday night and then started to choke their three-month-old son, Larry. When she was unable to pull him away from the child, she got his .38 caliber revolver and shot him in the back of the head, she told police.

Then, as he whirled around and started toward her, she fired five more bullets, police said. Johnson was pronounced dead on the scene by an Emergency Hospital staff doctor.

Police said Johnson was the owner of a restaurant at 1909 14th st. nw. Friends described him as a "sportsman."

Shout Leads To 2 Arrests In Warehouse

A housebreaking suspect who allegedly hired a lookout man and was rigging a hoist on a second-floor television-set warehouse was arrested with his accomplice early yesterday, police reported.

Police found the pair at Lacy's warehouse, 1530 Half st. sw., where they went in response to an anonymous telephone call. A ladder was reaching to a second-floor window on the building's east side, and one man was lounging at a corner of the building.

While police were questioning the lounger, a voice from a second-floor window was heard: "Don't lock him up. I'm the guy."

Both men were taken to the Fourth Precinct station and booked on charges of housebreaking. The alleged "lookout" man was identified as William R. Simms, 25, of 1313 Union st sw. The other suspect, police said, was Wilbur Buchanan, 19, 497 H st. sw.

According to police, Simms later told them he was offered $10 to act as lookout.

Express Buses For Shoppers Start Today

An experimental "shoppers' special" bus service will be started on two routes today by the Capital Transit Co. The purpose is to encourage slack-hour travel downtown by offering express service.

The buses will run on the A-9 line between Livingston Manor, in Southeast Washington, and 10th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., and the L-7 (a. m.) and L-3 (p. m.) lines running from Chevy Chase cir. to the Federal Triangle.

The A-9 special buses will leave Livingston Manor at 9:03, 9:33 and 10:03 a.m. and the return express runs will leave downtown at 3:20 3:50, 4:20 p.m.

The L-7 will leave the circle at 8:58 a. m. and repeat at half-hour intervals. The L-3 buses will leave the downtown area at 3:20, 3:50 and 4:20 p. m.

Boy, 7, and Bike Missing 12 Hours

Young Philip E. Knudsen, 7½, and his new bicycle disappeared from home yesterday from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

His father, Howard F. Knudsen, of 2000 38th st. se., said the boy had no explanation for his absence, except that he and a pal spent most of the time near a movie theater on Pennsylvania ave. se., and didn't realize what time it was. Philip will be restricted to quarters for the next month.

Queen Victoria's Granddaughter Dies

LONDON, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—The dowager Marchioness of Milford Haven, 87, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, grandmother of the Duke of Edinburg, died today at Kensington Palace.

The Marchioness was the eldest daughter of Grand Duke Ludwig IV of Hesse and Princess Alice Maud Mary, daughter of Queen Victoria. She married Louis Alexander Battenberg in 1884, the son of Prince Alexander of Hesse and Julie Princess of Battenberg.

Her full title was Victoria Alberta Elizabeth Mathilde Marie, Princess of Battenberg. When Louis died in 1921, he had served Britain as an admiral of the fleet and his title was Marques of Milford Haven.

Their children were:

Rear Adm. Earl Mountbatten of Burma; the late Marquess of Milford Haven, father of David Michael, the present, recently married Marquess of Milford Haven; Lady Louisa Mountbatten, now the second wife of Swedish Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf; Alice, her Royal Highness Princess Andrew of Greece, mother of Prince Philip, who married Princess Elizabeth.

Princess Andrew and the dowager marchioness were among the first people Philip telephoned when his and Elizabeth's first daughter, Anne, was born last month.

She had one brother and four sisters, including Alix, who married Tsar Nicholas II of Russia and was assassinated with him and their children in 1918.

King George VI tonight ordered a week of mourning for the royal family and scheduled a memorial service in London within a month.

Flaming Birthday Cake Surprises the Hostess At Alf Heibergs' Party

By Marie McNair

MRS. ALF HEIBERG, whose wit keeps pace with her years, celebrated a birthday with a birthday cake on Saturday at a surprise party given by her husband. At sight of the birthday cake brought in aflame, Louise remarked, "It has so many candles on it, it looks like a bonfire.

In addition to being Louise's birthday anniversary, the party was also a welcome to her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Cromwell, who are to live in Washington this winter.

Mr. Cromwell, former United States Minister to Canada and once married to the "world's richest girl," Doris Duke, has sold his house at Weehawken, N. J., moved into an apartment in New York, and now has leased an apartment at 2500 Q st. With the Cromwells is their baby daughter, Maxine (named for her mother), not yet two.

Georgetown neighbors who dropped in during the afternoon of the party were Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer (Mrs. Sawyer's in Cincinnati), Admiral and Mrs. Garret Schuyler, Mrs. Thomas R. Cowell and Miss Eleanor Baumgardner. Among others were Senator Theodore Green, Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward, Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. John Wattawa, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Gen. and Mrs. Virgil Peterson, Dr. and Mrs. William Cusack, former Senator Joseph Guffey and his sister, Miss Emma Guffey; Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Miss Bertha Joseph, Granville Swope, jr., of Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Graves.

BRIGHT LIGHTS DEPARTMENT

ALL DRESSED UP and going places is the redecorated Mayflower Lounge, which opens tonight for dinner and dancing.

The color scheme runs the gamut in shades of rose from the pale, dusty tone right on through to a rosy red. The walls are light, with pale rose metallic draperies hanging from their simulated white doorways. Valences of Italian antique irridescent taffeta are highlighted by the crystal sconces and a glittering center crystal chandelier 8 feet in diameter and weighing 1800 pounds.

Banquettes and chairs are upholstered in harmonizing shades of rose, and the tables will be laid with rose-colored linens.

After today the lounge will be open as usual for luncheon, tea cocktails, dinner and supper. The big Champagne and Orchid party will be given Friday evening, October 20.

Among those entertaining at dinner this evening will be Arthur K. Beckley of Berkeley, Calif., who lives at the Mayflower; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph E. Battley; Mrs. Elonzo Tyner; Gordon Peyton; Dr. and Mrs. Walter N. Bradshaw; Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weissinger.

Mr. Beckley's guests will include the Under Secretary of the Navy, Dan Kimball; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert P. Briscoe; Comdr. and Mrs. James W. McConnaughay; and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George E. Armstrong.

Maj. Gen. Cesare Lovera Di Maria, Italian representative to the Atlantic Pact Organization, will be a guest of Mrs. Tyner. Others are the Minister-Counselor of the Colombian Embassy and Senora de Garces.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE

CAVENDISH CANNON, newly appointed Minister to Syria, will leave on Tuesday with Mrs. Cannon for his new post. Long regarded as a top trouble-shooter in the diplomatic corps, it was Mr. Cannon who, as United States Ambassador to Yugoslavia, was influential in getting Tito to close the Greek frontier. Now his mission will be to try to bring order to a country beset by political unrest.

The Minister and Mrs. Cannon will go by boat, which stops only two hours in Portugal. But that will be time enough for Mrs. Cannon to get to the apartment which she leased in Lisbon when they left Belgrade, and gather up her silver and linens and some beautiful objets d'art for her new home.

MISS GENEVIEVE HENDRICKS, well-known decorator, will return to her Georgetown home on Wednesday after several months in Europe.

A pleasant part of her trip was spent near Cannes as the guest of Gen. and Mrs. Hugh Kroner at their home, Roquefort-Le-Pins. While in France she made special trips to Annecy and Thones, a little walled town that is a relic of the middle ages, and where her sister, Marjory Hendricks, had once spent several months.

In Rome Miss Hendricks was the guest of her cousins, the William Shepards of the United States Embassy. Mr. Shepard is the head of the Embassy's communications division. The Italian sector of her tour also included Florence and Naples.

PARTY PARADE

DR. AND MRS. NORMAN H. TOPPING entertained at cocktails on Saturday at the Naval Officers Club, Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, as a farewell to Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Dyer. Dr. Dyer is retiring from the United States Public Health Service after 34 years' service and has accepted a place as Director of Research at Winfield Clinic, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.

For the last eight years Dr. Dyer was Director of National Institutes of Health and has done much important research work. His name is especially associated with the discoveries made in the typhus fever field.

Red Cross Calls For Willing Hands

A SPECIAL APPEAL for 843 volunteer workers has been sounded by the District Red Cross. Mrs. David T. Finley, chairman of the District Red Cross Volunteer Services, has sent out a plea for 466 daytime volunteers and 377 evening workers.

The Washington volunteer is almost certain to find a job to suit her talents and schedule. She might be a nurses' aid at one of the local hospitals. She might join a canteen unit that meets military hospital planes landing in Washington; she might want to enlist in an entertainment team at Walter Reed Hospital, or she might choose social welfare work, helping to solve personal problems of servicemen and their families.

You interested? Then call Republic 8300, extension 2177, for more information. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 26-28, have been set aside as special recruitment days. Prospective volunteers may sign up at the headquarters at 1730 E st. nw., from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., and from 6 to 9 p. m., on any of the three days.

NURSES' AIDE—Nobody likes the dentist's chair but a calm voice and a reassuring hand help a lot. Mlle. Sophie Mayer, niece of the French Ambassador's wife, discussed the bicuspid situation with Miss Patricia Swab, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Swab, at Children's Hospital, where Mlle. Mayer has already put in over a hundred hours of Nurses' Aide duty

FIRST AID IN AN EMERGENCY—Members of the Red Cross Motor Service, who give many hours every week transporting personnel, supplies, and blood plasma, are also required to study first aid. Here three members of the Motor Service take an instructor's course so they can train new recruits. Practicing on Instructor Joe Aronoff, assistant director of Safety Services, while Director Dan Leonard supervises, are (left to right) Mrs. S. A. Van Every, jr., and Mrs. Allan P Slaff, Navy wives, and Mrs. Eugene Bielaski

BABY CARE CLASS—With a nursing shortage, it's doubly important for young mothers to be able to take care of their babies right from the first day on. Here Mrs. Maurice A. Goldberg (in Red Cross Uniform), a member of the Nursing Services Committee, drops in on a baby care class at Walsh House. The three students, practicing on dolls, are (left to right) Mrs. Bertam Danker, Mrs. C. D. Tupper and Mrs. L. H. Burroughs

CANTEEN SERVICE—Red Cross workers meet incoming hospital planes at Bolling Air Base to give the ill and wounded men aboard a quick snack before they are transferred to ambulances. In the photo at left, Miss Eileen Stroman pours a hot cup of coffee for Pvt. Frank Carl before a waiting Army medical corpsman whisks him off to Walter Reed Hospital. Pvt. Mothers in 'Y' Classes Can Park Youngsters

MOTHERS who are planning to enroll in morning courses at the YWCA this fall and those whose young fry are between two years and pre-school age, will be happy to know they can bring their youngsters along to the nursery which will be located on the YWCA's seventh floor.

Beginning tomorrow mothers will have a choice of days—Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays or Fridays—when the nursery is scheduled from 9:30 a. m. until 1 p. m. The nominal $6 fee will include 12 sessions of the nursery ending December 15.

Miss Christina Morley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Morley, has been appointed director of the new nursery. Miss Morley's plans include creative activities such as music, singing, rhythms, painting, imitative play as well as active, physical play. Particular emphasis will be placed upon the regular daily habits of the youngsters. The children will have a 15-minute rest period and will be served crackers and milk mid-morning, according to Miss Morley.

This year, for the first time, youngsters of board, committee members and volunteers may enroll their children, and the privileges of the nursery have been extended to include members of the Friday Morning Music Club which has met at the YWCA for many years.

Needn't Ride a Cock Horse To Banbury Cross for Real English 'Tarts'—Make Them

DEAR ANNE:

I read your reply to B. G., Hyattsville, in the column the other day giving a recipe for Banbury "Tarts." Admittedly, "tarts" are asked for, but the real name of the English pastry is Banbury Cakes. Being British, I would like to give you the English recipe:

BANBURY CAKES

Rough Puff Pastry: ½ pound flour.
6 ounces shortening (butter and lard mixed).
Cold water.

Sieve flour and salt. Cut shortening into lumps about the size of a walnut. Add to flour with lemon juice. Mix to a rollable paste with water. Turn onto pastry board and roll out to a long strip. Fold in three from top to bottom. Press edges together with rolling pin and give folded pastry a half turn to the right. Repeat the rolling, folding, and turning process three more times and cool in the refrigerator.

Filling: 1 ounce butter. 2 ounces sugar.
1 ounce cake crumbs. 4 ounces currants.
2 ounces candied peel. ¼ teaspoon mixed spice
1 small egg or egg yolk.

Roll pastry ⅛-inch thick and cut into 6-inch rounds. Beat shortening and sugar to a cream. Add egg, chopped peel, currants, crumbs, and spice. Put a little of this mixture into each round of pastry, slightly wet edges and bring them together along the top, sealing carefully. Turn over so as to have smooth surface upward and press slightly to flatten. Brush over with water and sprinkle with sugar. Bake 15 to 20 minutes at 450 degrees. Can be eaten hot or cold.

H. E. S., Falls Church, Va.

For the benefit of American cooks who are unused to measuring by weight but would like to try this English recipe: ½ pound flour equals 2 cups; shortening and sugar run 2 tablespoons per ounce; currants and candied peel would measure about 2½ tablespoons per ounce; cake crumbs, about 2 tablespoons per ounce.

DEAR ANNE:

In my daily work of dealing with medical problems of the indigent and semi-indigent, I have learned of a most pathetic situation and would like help in locating special shops that might be interested in showing home-made dolls for sale.

The woman who makes the dolls is a displaced person who came with her husband from Hungary about a year ago to work as farm laborers. They could not continue to do so due to a severe automobile accident which incapacitated the man. He has a Ph.D. in law, but so far has been unable to practice in America. They have only small savings accumulated before the accident to live on. Neither is physically able to work at present and their only income is from the sale of the dolls. The dolls are about 10 inches tall, dressed attractively, and would be most intriguing to a small child.

W. C. S., Washington.

I've talked to Mrs. Neyna Darcy at the K street craft shop operated for the benefit of shut-ins. She sells attractive articles, hand-made by people who are unable to do other work, on a commission basis. I'd suggest that the woman who makes the dolls take a sample of her work and call on Mrs. Darcy at 1764 K st. nw.

Experiment Winifred:

Nothing Quite So Aging As a Sagging Chinline

By Ann Lawrence

THERE'S NOTHING so aging as a bad chinline. And Winifred, despite the fact that she is only thirty-two, has the sagging, flabby chin of a woman of fifty.

Fortunately, it is not yet lined. But the muscles underneath the chin and the jawline droop and her extra weight adds more than the suspicion of a double chin.

There are two reasons. First, she has never used a nourishing cream on her neck. And second, about five years ago, she shed twenty pounds in a strenuous diet, losing the weight much too fast, with no exercise to accompany the diet. Today, although she has regained the weight, there are loose, flabby tissues over her body, particularly noticeable on her chin.

AT HER AGE, the remedy is quite simple.

First of all, Winifred applies a good, rich supplying cream, heavy in precious oils, that is especially compounded for the neck. Starting at her collarbone, she sweeps the cream up with the back of her hand, held flat against her neck. Thus, she massages the cream into the tissues and stirs up circulation at the same time. The rich oils will take care of the crepey look; the massage will send fresh, revivifying blood to the tired muscles—provided she follows the routine daily.

In the second beauty routine, she practices a simple exercise for tightening flabby tissue. With her shoulders squared and held back, she throws her head as far back as she can. And as she feels the pull of the muscles, she opens her mouth as wide as possible.

With an upward jerk of her chin, she closes her mouth, keeping her head held up and back. This may not look very pretty, but it is one of the most effective ways to control a chinline. She'll repeat it 20 times a day.

The second exercise also is a very simple one. With her fingertips on her shoulders (a reminder to keep them up and back) she drops her head forward towards her chest as far as it will go. Then, still holding her shoulders straight, she lets her head fall back as far as it will go. She then straightens her neck and repeats the exercise ten times daily.

Ingredients: ½ cup syrup from canned peaches, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh mint leaves, ½ cup strained orange juice, 3 tablespoons strained lemon juice, 1 cup canned cling peach slices (drained), 1 cup honeydew melon balls, mint sprigs.

Method: Put peach syrup and sugar in a saucepan and heat until it boils. Remove from heat, add mint leaves, cover and allow to cool. Strain. Add orange and lemon juce. Pour over peach slices and melon balls. Chill. Garnish each serving with a sprig of fresh mint. Makes 6 servings.

Note: To make melon balls use a vegetable ball cutter or a ¼- or ½-teaspoon size measuring spoon; reserve melon left and dice to use at another meal.

Alexandria 'Y' Groups Launch Fall Activities

THE INTERNATIONAL WIVES Club of the Alexandria YWCA will begin its fifth year of activity with a welcoming party for old and new members September 25 at 8 p. m.

Members are wives of servicemen from other countries, among them young women of Britain, France, Denmark, Sweden, Holland, Germany and Australia. In the past the members have enjoyed square dancing, cooking, whist drives, hat making, child care movies and discussion, singing, and parties including husbands.

THE BUSINESS GIRL'S Group of the Alexandria YWCA meets each Wednesday night at 8 at the "Y," 126 N. St. Asaph st. Newly elected officers are president, Margaret Talbert; secretary-treasurer, Kay Connolly; program chairmen, Dorothy McGuire and Dorothy Brown.

Plans for the future include a course in Charm and Personality Development. Square dance instruction will also be included in the fall program. The Business Girl's Group is open to young women between the ages of 19-35. Married women in this age group are welcome to join.

THE COURSE IN Parliamentary Law which the Alexandria YWCA is offering for officers and members of clubs will begin October 5 at 1:30 p. m. Mrs. Sarah Robert, authority on Robert's Rules of Order and trustee for its publishers, will teach the course. Five lessons, one each week, will be given in the series on October 5, 12, 19, 26 and November 2. Call the YWCA, AL 3286 to register.

Children's Bureau Films of Service

By Richard L. Coe

THE VALUE OF the "fact" film is well demonstrated by a new two-reeler produced by the Virginia State Health Department in cooperation with the U. S. Children's Bureau.

This is but one of many pictures not generally seen by the picture-going public. It's called "First as a Child" and last month won a first prize at the Venice Film Festival, formally known as the eleventh International Exhibition of Cinematographic Art.

The picture was made in Virginia and concerns what the States and the Nation is doing to help handicapped children. It is available through the Children's Bureau and there's a chance it may wind up on one of the city's commercial screens.

The important contribution of such pictures as this—and there are several more like it—is that it tells people who otherwise wouldn't know how they may help children for whom they think there is no help.

In back of these pictures is the congressional appropriation of 11 million dollars annually under the Social Security Act to help the States improve their services for maternal and child care and 7.5 million dollars to extend and improve their crippled children services. Each State, with the approval of the Children's Bureau, decides how it will use its share of the money.

"First as a Child" takes you into a modest Virginia home whose young crippled son is taken for diagnosis, treatment and after care that restores him to normal boyhood. Because his parents know so little of this governmental work, they have never expected to have him cured; only dogged work by the public health nurse makes them aware of such aid and their realization of his cure would answer many critics of the so-called Welfare State.

Nor should those same critics cry that such films as these are "political tracts." The tone is purely informative and for all the facts written about the government from Washington and the state capitals, there is information in this which many American citizens probably don't know.

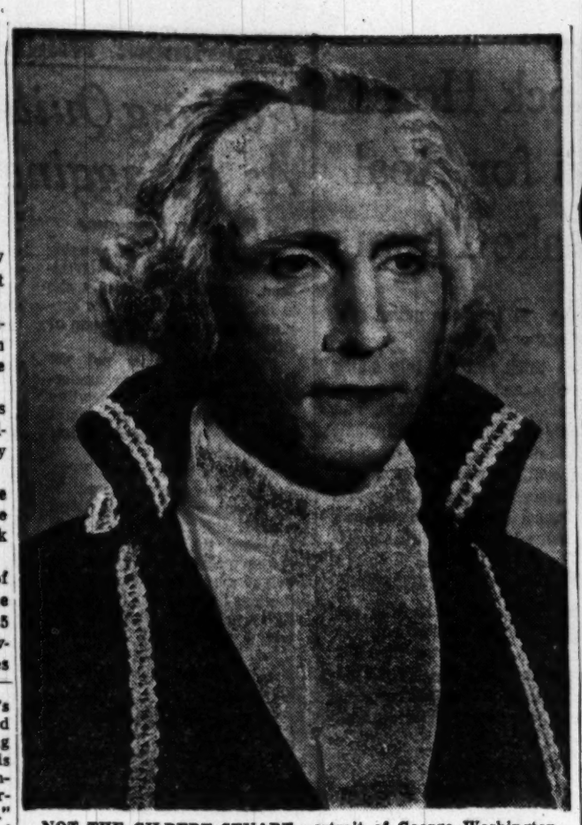
While such films as these were not made for commercial showing they are loaned without charge to community groups in all the states and territories, where their use on an information level is obviously of immense value.

IAN KEITH has taken over one of the leading roles in "Ashiepattle and the Princess," the musical comedy by Charlotte Smith and Ellen Dalton which will open a five-night run Wednesday night at the Olney Theater . . . Keith's long stage career was punctuated by a score of pictures, including roles in "Captain Kidd," "All This and Heaven, Too," "Abraham Lincoln," "Mary of Scotland," "Corregidor" and "Nightmare Alley." . . . He'll be playing the role of the King in the musical play, which has hopes for a New York production, according to Director Eddie Diamond.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "City Lights" returns today for a return at the Dupont.

THE AGRICULTURE Department's Graduate School this Thursday begins a series on audio-visual materials . . . Derek Fox and Howard Kany, both picture editors of estimable background, are to be among the guest speakers, with R. L. Webster of the DA and Seerley Reid of the Office of Education, as the instructors . . . Registration's now going on in the patio of the Agriculture administration building.

ARENA STAGE tonight begins its third and final week for "Of Mice and Men." In the cast are Henry Oliver, Lester Rawlins, Dorothea Jackson, Forrest Monroe, Tobe Fedder, Jack Carter, Harry Scully, Stuart Smith, Henry Daniłowicz and Henry Lampe.



NOT THE GILBERT STUART portrait of George Washington is this, but Lawrence Ryle made up as the first President for his leading role in "Faith of Our Fathers," which starts its final week tomorrow night in the new Sesqui Amphitheater in Rock Creek Park

Missing B-50 Bomber Found; All 16 Aboard Reported Safe

HALIFAX, Sept. 24 (AP).—All 16 persons aboard a United States B-50 bomber that crashed near Goose Bay, Labrador, are "safe and sound," the Royal Canadian Air Force search and rescue center here said tonight.

The air force said an RCAF Lancaster from the center at Greenwood, N. S., located the wreckage about 11 o'clock this morning.

An earlier announcement had said that wreckage of the plane, missing since Thursday night on a flight from Goose Bay to Tucson, Ariz., had been spotted in wild barren country 100 miles southwest of Goose Bay and there were at least 14 survivors.

The plane carried a crew of 12 and four passengers—all military personnel. Finding of the plane climaxed a vast air search that spread from the far North to the Arizona desert. A U. S. Army Air Force rescue unit at Goose Bay has already started preparations for evacuating the men, RCAF officials said.

(The Air Rescue Service in Washington said evacuation operations had been started by the dropping of rescue equipment, but that actual evacuation would not be attempted until Monday, when an amphibious plane would be used.)

The big bomber was on a routine training flight Thursday night to its home base at Tucson. The flight normally would have taken 12 hours. The wreckage was along the plane's great circle route.

Scores of planes took part in the hunt over the wild lands of Canada, the United States Middle-West and the desert reaches in the Southwest.

Next of kin of the 12 crew members and four passengers who were military personnel had already been notified that the 16 were missing. None were from the D. C. area.

Bunche Urges Peace Plan for United Korea

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, 1950 winner of the Nobel peace prize, today said he does not think there will be a third world war, and he urged the United Nations to speed formulation of Korea peace aims.

Bunche said he U. N. should not be satisfied with a Korean settlement that redivided the country at the Thirty-eighth Parallel. He added that the question of U. N. forces crossing the Parallel would present the world organization with a "terrific challenge."

"The way things are going militarily," he said, "the U. N. will find itself in the midst of that issue very soon."

Suggests Issue Transfer

The former Palestine mediator, first Negro ever to win the Nobel peace prize, also suggested that the big powers transfer such major issues as the German peace problem to the U. N. if they were unable to find a solution.

Bunche warned that "Germany might be another Korea" if it remained divided. He said no effort to force a peace settlement "on a vital problem that involves the peace of the world" should ever be given up until the U. N. had taken a crack at it.

This was a new concept in thinking about the U. N. Up to now, the world organization has been generally looked on as an organ devised to keep the peace, not make it.

"Peace has to be made or it can't be kept," Bunche said.

Expressing his "full faith in the U. N." he described it as "the one instrumentality on which all hopes rest," and added:

"I don't think any other machinery can work as well when problems affecting the peace of the world are involved."

Son Has "Surprise"

Bunche was interviewed in the living room of his apartment in Parkway Village, a Long Island housing development in which many U. N. officials live.

On the piano music rack was a cardboard "surprise" painted by his 7-year-old son after news of the Nobel award arrived Friday. It had a drawing, obviously intended to be Bunche, and a message that read: "Dear Daddy, I am happy you got the Nobel peace prize. Love, Ralph."

On Bunche's desk was a sheaf of congratulatory telegrams. The phone has hardly stopped ringing since news of the award came from Oslo. One of the callers was President Truman.

Bunche, who is director of the U. N.'s trusteeship division, made clear his view that the problem of peace was closely connected with what was done to solve the pressing problems of backward areas.

Letters Praise Teacher for Her Plea to Stalin

WARRENSBURG, Mo., Sept. 24 (AP).—Premier Stalin hasn't answered the plea-for-peace letter a Missouri school teacher sent him, but hundreds of Americans have written commending her efforts.

It was two weeks ago yesterday that Miss Icie F. Johnson, Central State College journalism teacher, sent the letter, asking Stalin to help "restore a permanent chance for peaceful living for all people."

She also sent a copy to President Truman. To date she has received no acknowledgment from the White House.

She wrote the Premier: "Let me plead with you, and our own President, to sit down together with a determination and faith that you can and will stop this murder of innocent people . . ."

Phantom Whistle Declared 'Inside Job and a Hoax'

PARADIS, La., Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Sheriff Leon Vial today said the phamtom "whistler" who terrorized an 18-year-old girl and her family by warbling funeral dirges is a hoax.

Vial said he and other St. Charles parish officers will prove it when they finish investigating, but they may not make an arrest.

Jacqueline Cadow, betrothed to a Louisiana State highway patrolman, was the object of the musical hex. Several weeks ago Jacqueline and her family heard the mournful whistle outside their house, followed by a hysterical laugh.

There were mysterious telephone calls, threatening harm for Jacqueline and her family if she marries Trooper Herbert Belsom. The sheriff said, however, "I am convinced that this whole thing is an inside job and a hoax." He refused to elaborate.

Brannan Reports Big Rise in Grain Storage Capacity

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan reported yesterday Government programs have increased the Nation's grain storage capacity more than 700 million bushels in 15 months.

This increase was made, he said, after the present Congress removed barriers to a Government storage program imposed by the Eighticth Congress.

A shortage of grain storage was an issue in the 1948 presidential campaign in midwestern grain States.

The department bought and set up storage facilities of its own, entered agreements to lease storage facilities built by private enterprise and made loans to farmers for building bins on their farms.

Government-owned storage now totals 547,489,991 bushels, the secretary reported. The reported increase of capacity by States included: Virginia, 1,124,348.

The Weather Summary

C. of C. Report

Pupil Cost Rises 37% In 9 Years

By The Associated Press

The United States Chamber of Commerce reported yesterday that the average cost of sending a pupil to public school increased from $88 in 1940 to $206 in 1949, or 134 percent.

However, adjusting the 1940 expense to the 1949 cost of living disclosed a "real increase in investment per pupil of approximately 37 percent," the survey said.

But national income shot up faster than school expenditures during the period. The study, compiled by the chamber's education committee, said that the percentage of total income devoted to education dropped from 2.55 percent in 1940 to 2.27 in 1949.

The two highest States in terms of percentage of income spent on education last year were South Dakota, with 3.65 percent, and New Mexico with 3.6.

The lowest were Missouri, with 1.76 percent, and Massachusetts, with 1.64, the committee noted.

The highest States in average pupil expenditure last year were New York, $312; Montana, $302; New Jersey, $298, and Connecticut, $297.

Lowest were Kentucky, $109; Alabama, $105; Arkansas, $102, and Mississippi, $73.

Plane Dives Into House; Three Injured

A Luray, Va., pilot, his 13-year-old daughter and her 10-year-old playmate were injured when the airplane in which they were flying crashed into a house 5 miles south of Luray yesterday afternoon.

Albert Black, 35, a garage mechanic, was admitted to Page Memorial Hospital with face cuts. His daughter, Sue, suffered a fractured left wrist, and Eddie Lillard, her playmate, was admitted with a back injury.

Members of the Luray Fire Department said the plane, a Piper Cub, dived into a tool shed on the farm of Irvin Foltz in Leaksville. The craft bounced off the shed and lodged in the roof of the two-story Foltz home.

Mrs. Irvin Foltz was resting in a second-floor bedroom when the engine and part of the cockpit punched through the ceiling. Gasoline dripped on her bed, but she was not hurt.

Foltz and members of his family ran out when they heard the crash and found Black, a flyer for seven years, sitting on the roof.

The right wing crumpled when the yellow plane hit the slanting tin roof. Electricity and telephones in the house were cut off.

Insane Asylum Art Makes Paris Colony Chatter

PARIS, Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Paris' Avant Garde painters have been shoved into a back seat by the insane. A new painting exhibition in this mecca of artists, beards and flowing manes is having a demoralizing effect in the artist warrens along the left bank boulevards.

The exhibition of psychopathological art—paintings from insane asylums all over the world—opened a few days ago to an audience of delegates attending the International Congress of Psychiatry.

The United States Veterans' Administration sent a large collection of paintings from mental institutions, explaining that one of the most significant paths in the treatment of mental patients is inducing them to draw and paint.

The American exhibit showed how a depressed patient chose dark, somber colors and an excited patient bright colors.

Beauty After Middle-Age

Don't Be a 'Frozen Asset' After 40

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of six articles written for women approaching 40—and older. Mrs. McLeod founded the Elizabeth Arden School and is the author of several books about beauty. These articles are from "Beauty After Forty," just published by Garden City Press.

By Edyth T. McLeod

CHAPTER ONE

The mature woman has the right to life, love and happiness. She should pursue that right without loss of dignity!

The average American woman in the group which is brutally termed "middle-age" is often a frozen asset when it comes to the question of sex.

There are, of course, the sophisticates of forty-plus, who make the headlines and who are, more often than not, "in residence" in Reno. These are the women who ride the mad merry-go-round and, to stimulate their appetites for life and love, change husbands and collect alimony.

They are generally forty-plus-plus, and they know their way around. This is not written for them. It is for the vast number of mature women who stand not on the brink of a "new life" but are teetering on the edge of an everyday, somewhat worn-out life.

Relation of Sex

Sex isn't the whole question of a maturing woman's serenity and growing older gracefully, but sex does play a tremendous part, though few mature women will admit it.

If you have been married for years to the same man (and many women are!), if you have grown-up sons and daughters and your life with your husband has been well balanced sexually—you are lucky.

Your approach to the Fourth Period of your life is easier, far less exhausting.

But if have tried to substitute your job for love and a normal sex life—you are not so lucky! I say tried with full understanding, because a career, a job, work, can never be a satisfactory substitute for love.

No Cause for Panic

You may let this new maturity panic you, unless you can approach this new phase of your life with calmness and penetrating insight. If you are widowed as you approach your mature life, you know what a partner has meant to you. You should consider carefully the possibilities of another marriage, but not with a man who is younger than you are.

Yes, I know it does work out now and then, but usually it's a dismal failure for both the young man and the mature woman. You can't cheat nature and be happy.

It is better by far to remain unmarried than to lose your dignity by "latching onto" a man too young for you.

If you are rich, he spends your money and dissipates your inheritance. He wants an easy life, though it doesn't turn out that way. If he is fulfilling a "mother complex" you don't want to be the answer to that. So think well before you select a husband or let one select you.

Remarriage Advocated

But I do advocate marriage or remarriage for the mature woman. You can establish a pleasant life, find new interests and, very often, find romantic love with an understanding man of your own age, or older.

The gay young men of the gigolo types are pampered, petted, and coddled by mature women of the "smart set" who have more time and money than brains.

These gay young men are anxious to please. They are talented; they dance well, they toss up a salad or mix a drink with equal grace. They run errands and tell stories, good or bad, with a flair, and they flatter the mature ladies who pick up the luncheon or cocktail checks. They compliment them on their wit, their charm, their clothes and their hats. And mature women, who should know better, fall into the "butterfly net."

But danger lies that way. This is no answer to the problem of what to do with yourself and your new-found leisure. Remember, you will soon be discarded for the next obliging woman (with checkbook and weekends in the country!) who takes their eye or their fancy.

Develop New Interests

Mature women whose husbands are chasing the almightly dollar, a golf ball, or a blonde, often fall into stupid habits because they are lonely. But there are so many new interests, so many new things to learn and to do. You might even take an interest in your husband's business, learn to play golf—or invite the blonde to dinner—with a charming young man of her own age as a dinner partner!

A full-blown rose is often more fascinating than a simple rosebud; and the mature modern woman can be fascinatingly fashionable and fit. You have the experience of living, perhaps loving and, I hope, laughing. So put your life's experience to work now in this challenging Fourth Period of your life.

Please remember this—being forty or forty-plus isn't a disease. If you live, you reach it; it comes to all, men and women alike. Keep up with current events. Never allow yourself to say, "That's not the way they used to do things!"

That line of thought is fatal—and it dates you! Certainly, what you know is important, but if you want to be in on modern conversation and thought, don't look back too often or too long.

Make Yourself Attractive

You, as a mature woman, are important in the scheme of things. You can start an entire new life now that you have reached the high peak of your existence. Justify your arrival at this age by making yourself more attractive than you have ever been.

You can, perhaps for the first time in your life, be a complete individual. So often your duties for home and family are finished. Now you can express YOU, through new thoughts; lead a new kind of life, be a leader in your group.

There are so many things to do for Beauty After Forty. Come with me into a new realm. Consider dyeing your hair if you really want to, plan a new color scheme. Make yourself into that new woman. You CAN

29,000,000 Women

The census bureau reports more than 29 million women in the United States are at or above the age of 40.

Edyth Thornton McLeod is a recognized authority on this subject. First, she admits to being "forty-plus." Second, she understands the psychology and the physiology of women in the "middle years." With breezy good sense, she helps women achieve beauty and peace of mind.

Broker to Head Unit In Cathedral Drive

Richard A. Sebastian, an investment broker associated with Robert T. Jones & Co., has been named head of the men's general committee in the Washington Cathedral fund campaign.

The campaign, in which volunteers will seek to raise $50,000 in the Washington area, will be conducted from October 9 through November 9. The Nation-wide drive, with $500,000 as the goal, will open on the same date but will continue over a longer period.

More Material!

Stand by for Some Repeats on Video

By John Crosby

YOU'RE LIKELY to see a lot of drama on television this fall, so much of it that the old complaint, "Where's all the material coming from?" is likely to receive its first serious test In addition to the old standbys, Ford Theater, Studio One, the Robert Montgomery show, Philco and Kraft theaters, eight new dramatic shows are scheduled. Between them they should burn up stories faster than Hollywood can call a script conference.

Crosby

My guess is you're going to see the same stories again and again with different actors. Children like to hear the same stories again and again, but I'm not at all sure that adults do. Robert Montgomery's theater, for example, has "A Star Is Born" on its schedule which, of course, will be a live dramatic production. Well, the movie, an original from which Montgomery will have to adapt his script, is doing the rounds on TV now, and Montgomery will have quite a chore duplicating the original cast (Fredric March and Janet Gaynor), to say nothing of William Wellman's fine direction and script writing and David Selznick's superlative production.

Montgomery ran into the same problem with his opening production, "The Awful Truth," a bright though thin comedy which depended heavily on the expertness and charm of its principal actors, Cary Grant and Irene Dunne. In the same roles on TV, Lee Bowman and Jane Wyatt were deft and altogether attractive but they were no match for the originals. Incidentally, tonight (NBC-TV—WNBW, 9:30 p. m.) Montgomery will offer "The Big Sleep."

FORD THEATER'S first production was Herman Wouk's "The Traitor," a play which had less success than it deserved on Broadway. "The Traitor" is a fast-moving and ingenuous melodrama—it has a honey of a first act, a more than adequate second act and a weak third act.

It was fine theater, though, and it contained a fine gusty, just occasionally hammy, performance by Tracy, and an unusually restrained one by Walter Hampden as an aging professor torn between conflicting loyalties. Both men, incidentally, have stage presence; they project a certain sense of imminent excitement into even their smallest actions which keeps your attention rooted even when the drama flags a bit.

IT WAS LACK of this quality that pretty well marred Philco Theater's first production of the season, Maxwell Anderson's old play, "High Tor." "High Tor," a comedy, was pretty much of a romp for Mr. Anderson between more serious works. It was made plausible only by the fact that the directors and the actors performed it with a twinkle in their respective eyes—especially in the eyes of Burgess Meredith who played the lead. On TV, the Meredith role was filled by a young man who appeared to take it all terribly seriously which led the audience right in the opposite direction. Whenever he was out of sight of the cameras, though, it was pretty good fun.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Handy—In an Irksome Sort of Way

W. M. Devine of 234 F st. nw. says every bridegroom ought to be reminded: "He who hesitates is bossed."

But as one who is better than a green pea at this marriage business, I might point out that being slightly henpecked isn't nearly as bad as it sounds.

True enough, it cramps a fellow's style a bit. But it also saves him the trouble of making his own decisions—and when things turn out bad he's got somebody to blame.

SPEED TRAP

A local motorcycle policeman has been doing a brisk business in nabbing pre-dawn motorists who exceed the speed limit. But I don't think he'd care to have Major Barrett find out the secret of his success.

Our hero hides in a gas station until a likely prospect comes along. Then he gives chase—with his lights off. After clocking the offender, he turns on his headlight and orders the motorist to the curb.

Anybody who breaks the law by speeding deserves to be punished. There's no argument about that.

But what about the guy who breaks the law by running without lights at night?

Major Barrett says he doesn't believe in speed traps. A motorcycle man can't keep rolling every minute of the time he's on duty, and he's entitled to stop occasionally. But his superiors think his basic function is to patrol, rather than to hide; and I doubt that they're very keen about the idea of a policeman turning lawbreaker to catch a lawbreaker.

Most of our motorcycle officers are exceptionally good men. I hope that this one will also see the light—and no pun intended.

Just for the sake of the record, this is not a personal gripe. I have never been cited (or even stopped) for speeding in the six years I've been in Washington. The foregoing item is based on complaints from readers.

EMILY POST ON TIPPING

"Don't you know that 10 percent is no longer considered an acceptable tip?" writes a local waiter. "Even Emily Post has pointed out that since the war your server must get bigger tips to cover the increased cost of living, and diners should leave at least 15 per cent now."

I do not feel qualified to argue with Emily Post on matters pertaining to good manners. And, never having been a waiter, I don't think I ought to dispute my correspondent's word, either.

But I would like to raise a question about a simple matter of arithmetic.

When the waiter's cost of living went up, so did yours and mine. The restaurant meal that used to cost $1 is now priced at a minimum of $1.50, and perhaps more.

The man who tipped a strict 10 percent used to leave a dime for the waiter. Now he leaves 15 cents.

If we ask him to leave 15 percent, he'd be tipping a quarter (unless he's the kind who figures it down to the penny). In other words, he'd be shelling out a bigger percentage based on a higher priced meal, and his tips would run at least double what they used to.

I wonder whether Emily Post's rules take into account the arithmetic of modern living — or the fact that many folks today are forced to eat in restaurants on budgets that allow little margin for generosity.

Personally, I try to tip a bit beyond my means, simply because I'm glad I'm not a waiter who has to put up with impatient customers like me. But I don't think we ought to sneer at folks who can't afford more than a modest gratuity.

Some tippers make less than the waiters they tip, you know.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two half-Siamese kittens." (Ludlow 4-2271 after 7 p. m.)

"Maltese mother cat and kittens." (Hillside 3960.)

"Back issues of Nation Magazine." (Twining 1159.)

"Fat, frisky, affectionate 8-week-old male kitten." (Temple 4237.)

"Two exceptionally beautiful part-Persian male kittens, 6 weeks old." (Oliver 2238.)

Give-Aways mailed on Thursday are not received in time to be included in the Saturday column, because early editions are on the newsstands Friday evening. Please mail your items early.

CLUB NEWS

Next meeting of the District Liners Club will be at 8 tonight, in the basement of the Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw. Bill Devine, just back from his second vacation of the year, will describe his adventures in Cuba. You're all welcome to attend.

PERSONAL NOTES

Elizabeth M. Sweeney, 727 20th st. nw.: I'm not surprised to hear that some of your kittens were taken by well-to-do callers. Even the famous Drew Pearson adopts a Give-Away kitten on occasion. One explanation may be that these folks are trying to save unwanted animals that would otherwise be "put to sleep."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

In case you missed it, here's what John Reed King had to say on a recent WTOP "Give and Take" program:

"Detroit has produced 2 million automobiles so far this year. In the same period, only 1 million babies were born.

"This kind of thing can result only in a shortage of pedestrians, and the drivers will have to hit on some other device—probably each other. But maybe it doesn't matter if there aren't enough pedestrians to go around. I've never seen a driver go around one yet."

Anti-U. S. 'Mata Hari' in Korea Cited

By Drew Pearson

There has been a lot of congressional debate as to who was to blame for our being caught napping in Korea. But no Congressman has touched upon the most amazing story of Korean espionage—the manner in which a Korean Mata Hari lived at the home of an American Army colonel and gave the Communists intimate details on American Army strength.

Pearson

The lady in question, now executed as a spy, was Kim Soo Im, a vivacious, American-educated Korean girl who was married to one of Korea's top Communists, Lee Kang Kook.

At the same time she was married to Lee she was the intimate of a top American colonel, John E. Baird, who, as provost marshal, was in charge of keeping law and order among American troops in Korea. He was also top adviser to the new Korean army.

Colonel Baird occupied one of the most elegant houses in Seoul, and for a time Madam Kim lived there, too.

It was well known to Koreans that Kim Soo Im was intimate with the colonel. They were seen together publicly. And it was also known by many Koreans that she was married to Lee Kang Kook, who had been hiding from the military government and for whom the authorities had thrown out a dragnet.

However, because of American prestige, Koreans did nothing about the situation. After all, Americans were Korea's benefactors, the trainers of Korean troops, in effect the rulers of the country. Colonel Baird himself was senior adviser to the Korean army. So it was embarrassing to make any protest.

When the above facts, plus a great many others, were disclosed officially at the time of Kim Soo Im's trial, Colonel Baird gave the official explanation that he was using the lady as his interpreter and to get information from her.

Furthermore, when Kim Soo Im was tried, last May, the Koreans amassed such overwhelming evidence against her that she confessed all. Colonel Baird, who had been in intimate day-to-day contact with her, was made to look extremely foolish for not having known the same facts.

Escape in Jeep

For more than a year, Lee Kang Kook managed to foil the South Korean police and American military. Eventually, he escaped into North Korea in an American Army jeep—by courtesy of Colonel Baird's friend.

Colonel Baird had given Kim Soo Im a new Chrysler. However, she did not use this car to take her husband across the Thirty-eighth Parallel. Instead, she finagled a jeep from the Army motor pool and had it driven by a trusted Communist driver, Choi Yong Tai.

Lee was disguised as a doctor, and Kim went along to tell the border guards that her mother was desperately ill in North Korea and the doctor was on his way to see her. Thus the No. 2 Communist of Korea escaped—thanks to the United States Army.

On one occasion, when Kim wanted to get an Army jeep for a trip up near the Thirty-eighth Parallel, Harry Frelinghuysen, son of the GOP ex-Senator from New Jersey, then an Army lieutenant, refused. However, he was overruled by a colonel. Madame Kim got the jeep.

The case of Kim Soo Im and Colonel Baird probably could have taken pace in various parts of the world—especially in Japan and Germany, where American troops are stationed far from home and families. And what the Army is worried about right now is that other Communist spies might be planted on American officers.

Colonel Baird, 60 years old, born in Ireland, was a policeman in Rhode Island and a reserve officer when he joined the Army as a major in 1941. He was stationed in Korea for four years, three of them as provost marshal, one of them as "senior adviser to the Korean National Police."

Kim Soo Im, orphaned at an early age, was raised by an American missionary family and educated in an American school. She spoke English perfectly, acquired the vivaciousness of an American girl.

When American troops entered Korea she served as hostess at the Banta Hotel in Seoul, which was General Hodges' headquarters. This was the United States Army's nerve center and it gave her access to all sorts of gossip and tidbits which she relayed to her Communist husband.

During her trial it developed that Kim had given the Communists the complete plans for the withdrawal of United States troops from Korea. It was also revealed that she had a large amount of Japanese yen and was spending it in Seoul, perhaps for bribery, perhaps to create inflation.

Colonel Baird left Korea on June 3, before Kim Soo Im was executed. He is now on leave from the Army.
